KENT, James.Tiller,, 1849-1916, USA James Tyler Kent, A.M., Chicago, Illinois, professor of Mathia Medica at Hanneman Medical College, Chicago physician and author of several valuable medical works, was born in Woodhull, Steuben County, New York, born in 1849, son of Steven Kent and Caroline Taylor, his wife. His primary and secondary education was acquired at Franklin Academy, Prattsburg and his higher education at Madison University (now Colgate), Hamilton, New York, where he reached ph.B., in 1868; A.M. He graduated in medicine from the Eclectic Medical Institute, Cincinnati, Ohio, graduating there in 1871 and homeopathic Medical College in Missouri, St. Louis, where he received that institution's diploma in 1889. Dr. Kent began his professional career in St. Louis as an eclectic school doctor at the same time actively associated with several eclectic journals as a writer and also took a serious stake in the boards of Eclectic National College. St. Louis, 1877-188, for which time his attention was heavily focused on homoenpathy, through the serious illness of his wife , whose work refused to succumb to treatment or to his own eclectic or allopathic school practitioners , but was subject to homeopathic treatment. He then became a thoughtful disciple of Hahnemann Organon and other works of the new school, as a result of his complete conversion to homosectopathy, his resignation from eclectic Medical Association in 1879 and his appointment as chairman of Anatomy at the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri, which he held from 1881 to 1883, and a professor of From 1883 to 1888 he was later dean and professor of Matter Medica at the Postgraduate School of Homeopathy, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Dean and Professor of Matter Medica at Dunham Medical College, Chicago; Dean and Professor of Medicare of Matter at Herring Medical College, Chicago; and in 1905 he held the same chair at Hanneman Medical College, Chicago. For more than thirty-five years, Dr. Kent has been an obvious figure in medical circles and for more than twenty-five years in teaching and practice under the law of the day; and he is seen as one of the most capable teachers and distinctions of the homeopathic school in America. His contribution to the literature of the profession is known for its strength rather than its length, and includes, more prominently, its Reperttoria, Homoeoapthic philosophy and Lectures on Matter Medica. Among the various professional associations of which he is a member, more prominently than them, were the Illinois State Homeopathic Medical Society, the American Institute of Homoethopathy and the International Hanneman Association, and he also holds an honorary corresponding member of the British Homoeopathic Medical Society.
