

OUR VISION

Young Jewish volunteers from Israel and the Diaspora acting together for the advancement of social resilience of under served populations and communities around the world. Focusing on informal methods of education activities are conducted in cooperation with local individuals in the spirit of universal Jewish values and the pursuit for social justice, so as to represent the Jewish People and the State of Israel in a dignified manner. Volunteers leverage their experience to become involved social leaders in their home communities.

WHO WE ARE

Project TEN Centers are currently active in seven countries around the world, offering three-month tracks focusing on informal educational programming and empowering the local community. In Israel, program duration is five months and includes similar programming as well as opportunities for strengthening and advancing co-existence between Jewish and Arab populations. Project TEN also offers customized short-term programs during spring, summer, and winter breaks. Our volunteers are 18–30 years old who are committed to social action and sustainable change.

BOOKS & THINGS LEARNING CENTERS: INFORMAL METHODS OF EDUCATION

Project TEN locates a physical space in each country to be used as an educational center that is accessible to schools and communities. The volunteers and the staff initiate educational activities for the benefit of the local community. The primary focus of these activities is on developing life skills through play and experiential learning. The activities in the Books & Things Learning Centers are intended for children and youth, but as part of the holistic and comprehensive vision of Project TEN. The volunteers also work with all the other change agents relevant to a child's life: parents, teachers, and leaders in the community.

ETHICAL CODE

Our volunteers are guided to do everything in their power in order to conduct themselves with cultural sensitivity through careful acquaintance and in tune to the needs of the community while understanding our own limitations. We expect our volunteers to be professional and follow the guidance of Project TEN staff. To be humble by the possibility they have to work with local communities. To respect the people we interact with, to safely supervise the work with children and youth. Be respectful and follow photography policies, and to hold to the principals of Project TEN during every activity that takes place anywhere in the world.
