There are different size charts for different shapes. The shape that fits best can be determined by the belt as well as the length of the step. Both values can be determined by roulette. To measure the waist, you need to place the tape in the narrowest middle of the body. The length of the step is determined by applying a measuring tape along the inside of the leg. You have to measure from the length of the step to your foot. If you want to buy suit pants, you should make sure that the measure stops in front of the ground. This way you will ensure that the suit pants fall neatly on top of your shoes. This is different in the case of casual pants because it is enough for you to measure half the height of your heel. It also ensures that the pants are not contaminated too quickly - for example, when travelling outdoors. Belly sizes for men If you are a man who prefers a little above the belt, you should choose a pants in the so-called size of the abdomen. In order to determine the correct size of the abdomen, you have to measure approximately at the navel level. The belly size system is designed according to the system of regular size, but is given in odd quantities. Belly sizes start at a size 47 and end at a size of 79. In terms of size, all known manufacturers give two dimensions. While the first measure is 26 to 48 and points to the belt, the second measure is 30 to 36 and reflects the length of the step. Men's pants are made in a variety of waist combinations and stride lengths, so you can easily find the right pants for your individual physique. Pants are measured in centimetres in Europe and inches in the US. The size of the belt is usually indicated with W. For trousers with a value of W 25, this means a pair with the smallest, most common width of the belt, namely 25 inches. This belt width is especially for women's jeans, but can be found among jeans for boys and corresponds to a belt of 63.5 centimeters. The standard minimum value for men's trousers W 28, with a belt width up to W 40. The length of the foot is also indicated in inches and marked by L. Just as with classic clothing sizes, the inner seam of the trouser is measured as well. In principle, the length of men's and women's jeans does not differ and varies from the length of 30 inches, i.e. L 30, to a length of 36 inches, i.e. L 36. Individual manufacturers also produce in intermediate sizes, which are indicated by odd numbers. The combination of the two numbers that can be found on jeans and other casual trousers thus determines the width of the belt as well as the step A pair of trousers at a size of 30/32, therefore, has a belt of 30 inches and a step length of 32 inches. If you want to convert the size into a metric system, you have to use a factor of 2.54 because the inch is 2.45 centimeters. Thus, the 32-inch-long pair has a stride length of 81 centimeters. Aside from the size of the pants, cut and fit are the most important features. American size pants If you want to convert American size clothing into European clothing or pants size, this is a children's game because you only need to add a value of 10. In other words: a pair of American size 40 trousers corresponds to a size 50 in Europe. British size trousers If you want to know which European size pants fit the British size of the trousers, you should do the same as you did with the American size of the trousers, that is, add 10. Thus, a pair of Trousers British size 48 corresponds to a size 58 in Europe. For more guidance on how to transform EU sizes into UK sizes, click here. Italian dress sizes There is no formal difference between Italian pants size and European because Italy and Europe work with the same measurement system. When buying a pair, you should remember, however, that pants made by Italian manufacturers tend to be a bit over already. French dress sizes French size trousers are different. If you want to buy pants at a size 40, you have to choose a size 42 in France. Thus, there is a difference in different lots. Asian Clothing Sizes Find a comprehensive size guide for Asian clothing sizes here. These forms of cutting are available One criterion with which to classify different types of pants is the cut. As for the length, they can be distinguished among long trousers, trousers 7/8 and 3/4, as well as shorts and hot trousers. In addition, trousers are differentiated depending on how wide they are, what shape of the legs they have, or how high the belt. For example, trousers with a fairly low belt are called hipsters, and trousers with a very high belt are called High Waist Pants. The so-called Baggy pants are wide-cut, with a belt that sits under the hip. Buggy pants and cargo pants have a similar cut, but cargo trousers do not sit below the waist. Leggings, treggings, stirrup trousers, as well as drainpipe trousers, skinny jeans, Capri pants and hot pants have a pretty narrow cut. While Capri's trousers reach the middle of the calves and are usually slightly cut at the sides, the hot pants are tight, tight shorts. Flared trousers are among the models with a narrow top and wide bottom, which are also often called tubular trousers because of their tubular shape. At a glance, to determine the size of your pants, you need to measure your (1) belt (W) and (2) feet or stride length (L). Pants sizes in the U.S. are usually labeled as W (x)/L (y) W34/L32 or 34/32). To get the appropriate size of the UK or THE EU, you need to refer to the international size transformation chart. The belt is always measured at the narrowest point of the body, namely the waist. For the length of the trouser (isses), measure inside the leg, from the perineum all the way to the level of the ankle or leg. Record values in inches and inches. The size of the trousers varies between different brands and abbreviations. Today there are no clear standards available, so you need to refer to specific size charts of each brand to find the pants that suit you best.
