Reading The New Business Part One years ago when I was back in my twenties and still working for a large company I decided to quit my caution to wind up and start my own business. In the beginning it was by no means a simple swim and I had to go through a lot of bad times. At one point I had a close shave with bankruptcy, but I was able to get a big sale just at the last moment and my company was saved. Phrases: Throw caution to the wind: take risks. Example: Even if he doesn't have much experience, let's throw caution into the wind and hire him. No way: it means definitely not. Example: Of course, you can run a marathon, but by no means will it be easy. Simple Sailing: It is used when you want to say that something is easy and that was smooth. Example: I studied very hard, so the exams were basically plain sailing. A A Shaving: A happy escape from danger. Example: It was a close shave. He almost caught me reading his personal diary. At the very last moment: just in time. Example: I was paid at the very last moment. I just ran out of money. Part 2 At some point I completely ran out of money and had to let go of a few employees. This rough patch lasted most of the year, but I was able to ride it and keep my company running long enough until the business improved. Looking back, while it was a difficult period for me, the result was that I was able to pick up a lot of new skills and became much more self-reliant. Phrases: To run out (something): use all your supplies for something. Example: We're about to run out of gas, so let's stop at the next station. Let go of the staff: this is a good way to say: an employee has been fired or fired. It is often used when it is not the employee's fault, when the company can not afford to use them anymore, etc. Example: Because of the economic downturn we had to let go of half of our employees. Rough Patch: This means a difficult period of time. Example: After I lost my job I went through a rough patch financially. For the most part (period of time): it is used to express the fact that something lasted for most of a certain period of time. Illustration 1: I was sick for most of the last month.
