Streaming services comparison cnet

Comedy streaming service Seeso has announced it is shutting down. We write to let you know that later this year, Seeso will be closing its comedic doors, she wrote to the company in a Facebook post that was also noticed by Variety. Seeso, which is owned by COMcast's NBCUniversal, says many of its original programs have already found new homes. As is the case with many niche over-the-top services, it was simply able to collect enough subscriptions to stay afloat. The service was launched less than two years ago. And this really shouldn't come as a surprise. After an influx of individual over-the-top services saturated the market—Sony Crackle, Sling TV, Vudu, Verizon go90, YouTube Red, the list goes on—it's only a matter of time before other similar services start biting dust. Fotos International/Getty Images Gone are easy days for Netflix and chill thanks to new players like Disney+, HBO Max, and Peasants — we've never had so many streaming platforms to watch. But even if you're figuring out which premium subscription services are worth your time, you may be overlooking a wide range of streaming services that are also there for a low, low price of $0. And while you may need to be fine with ads to enjoy many of these budget-friendly options, there are also some innovative platforms partnering with libraries and schools to offer movies that are not only free but ad-free. It's not better than this! Below we've rounded up the top 10 free streaming services where you'll find everything from recent blockbusters, indie favorites, to classic movies you'd like to tick off the list. Advertising — Continue reading under 1 Canopy This film-centric platform offers an impressive array of recent indie and world movie hits, including Moonlight, Eighth Grade, Girlhood, Lady Bird, Timbuktu, Killing a Sacred Deer, and Disaster Artist. If you're looking to tick some classics off your Watch list, Kanopy can help out there, with offerings like Solaris, Italian Work, and His Girl Friday, while the Canopy Kids section will keep the whole family happy. How to watch: Kanopy works with libraries and educational institutions, so you'll need a library card or university affiliation to use the service. When you sign in Kanopy.com library or eligible university credentials, you create an account and then start browsing. 2 Pluto TV This Viacom-owned platform offers over 200 traditional free live TV channels, including MTV, Comedy Central, Nickelodeon, and even Court TV if it's your jam. Pluto also offers an ad-supported On Demand selection of small and big screen classics - movie highlights right now include Grease, Clue, Young Adult, and Shaft, while on the TV side, there are faves like Deglassi and Third Rock From the Sun. How to watch: You can download the Pluto TV app of the year, Chromecast, Amazon Fire Stick, or Android device, or simply go directly to the site in your browser. You'll be prompted to sign in to your account, but you can start tracking without it. 3 Popcornflix If you can look past a deeply un-catchy title, Popcornflix makes a valuable addition to the streaming arsenal. This ad-supported service features films such as the Gregory Peck/Audrey Hepburn classic Roman Holiday and the Warren Beatty-starring drama The Reds, along with newer releases such as the stellar 2011 adaptation of Lionel Shriver's novel We Need to Talk About Kevin. Popcornflix also offers its own original content, although it's a safe bet you won't be familiar with most of its offerings. How to watch: Over your head Popcornflix.com in your browser to look at their selection. 4 Tubi Tubi is a service that brings together content from several Hollywood giants, including Paramount Pictures, MGM, Lionsgate, Warner Bros., and Universal Pictures. As you might imagine, this means an impressive selection of blockbusters, from the Terminator to the Top Five to Quentin Tarantino's Kill Bill. For action fans who don't mind watching with ads, Tubi is hard to beat. How to watch: You can download tubi on a variety of devices like Roku, Playstation, Xbox, or Amazon Fire Stick, or just click tubitv.com in your browser. 5 Hoopla Along with offering audiobooks and e-books, Hoopla is a great choice for catching up with classic movies — their rotating monthly selection offers a variety of genres, and currently includes a Gwyneth Paltrow-starring adaptation of Emma and the original West Side Story. On the newer side, there's the unmissable vampire mockumentary What We Do in the Shadows, which has since become a TV show on FX. How to watch: Like Kanopy, Hoopla works with libraries to make its content available for free. You can go to hoopladigital.com and enter information about the library card to see if your library is appropriate. 6 Crackle Sony launched this little-known streaming service many years ago, but rebooted it last year as a joint venture with Chicken Soup for Soul Entertainment. The ad-supported service offers many classic films, such as Sunset Boulevard and Girl, discontinued, plus recent blockbusters like 10 Cloverfield Lane. There are also nostalgic TV deals like Enchanted and Original Charlie's Angels. How to watch: You can head straight to Crackle.com and start browsing - you don't even need an account. 7 Roku Channel You can also be well already familiar with Roku, which is one of the most popular devices for at-home streaming. But even many Roku users aren't aware of The Roku Channel, which makes streaming content supported by advertising available to everyone, even if you don't have a device. Signing up for a premium subscription will bring you more content, but on the free side are some stellar movies like The Shining, Dirty Harry and Ordinary People. How to watch: Go to The Roku Channel site, or open the app using your Roku if you have one. You'll be prompted to sign in to your account, but you don't need to do so to view free content. 8 IMDb TV Internet Movie Database is getting into streaming video games that offers some of its own original content as well as ad-supported streaming of movies and shows. The current selection of films includes a range of must-watchers like Eat Pray Love, Spotlight, Donnie Darko and Memento, and on the TV side, you can catch up with binge-worthy recent shows like Schitt's Creek, White Collar, and Desperate Housewives. How to watch: If you don't have an IMDb account yet, you can make one IMDb.com/tv, or just sign in with Amazon credentials. From there, go ahead and browse in your spare time. 9 Vudu This platform is owned by Walmart (because yeah, even Walmart wants a piece of streaming pie) and is primarily designed to offer paid movie rentals. However, they also offer a selection of free movies to stream ads, including The Prestige, Thelma & Louise, Buried and The Insider.How to watch: You'll also need to create a Vudu account for free content. Go to vudu.com register - if you have a Walmart account it will work here as well - and then click on the Free tab to see the full selection. 10 Apple TV+ Although Apple's relatively new streaming service isn't free, it offers an unusually generous trial period – as long as you're an Apple loyalist. If you recently purchased any Apple device or plan to do so soon, you're eligible for a year of free Apple TV+, which typically costs $4.99 per month (you can read the full terms of the offer here). Apple TV+ offers a range of high-profile original content, including The Morning Show and Oprah's Book Club. How to watch: To qualify for a free trial, you'll need to buy either a new iPhone, iPad, iPod, Apple TV or Mac, and you'll also need to redeem the offer within 90 days of purchase. The easiest way to apply the offer is to open the Apple TV app with your new device and click on the 1 year free offer. This content is created and maintained by a third party and imported to this page to help users provide their email addresses. You may be able to find more information about this and similar content on piano.io With the best free streaming service, you can watch great movies and TV shows – and not add one dollar to your monthly bills. These free streaming services offer live TV and on-demand content, mostly older and classic titles, as well as some newer hits. The streaming space has gotten very crowded over the past year, with launches TV, Disney Plus, Apple TV Plus and HBO Max. Have joined the already existing streaming behemoths Netflix, Hulu and Amazon Prime Video. They have different pros and cons, but they have one thing in common: they cost money (although Peasants are unique in that it has a loose layer). When cinemas and other entertainment facilities were closed during the pandemic, people needed streaming services more than ever before. But signing up for all of them just isn't financially feasible. This is where the best free streaming services come from. They can provide hours of overeating pleasure at no cost. You'll have to watch the ads, but that's nothing but what you get on the cable. And again: They are free! And since it costs $0, you can sign up for all the best free streaming services on our list. Yet they have different strengths and weaknesses, so keep reading to see what each one has to offer. Access iPlayer outside the UK with iPlayer VPNor to use free VPN to stay protected for nothingWhat are the best free streaming services? The best free streaming services aren't designed to compete with the likes of Netflix. They don't have the latest TV series, blockbuster movies or high-quality originals. You won't get next-day episodes of popular shows or watch prize winners with Hollywood's biggest stars. And that's okay, because, well, they're free. All the best free streaming services are supported by advertising. They play 30-second to 60-second ads, generally to the same extent as a cable network. Yes, ad tracking is annoying, but again, that's what allows these platforms to be free. Some free streaming services offer live channels, while others offer content on demand. Several of them have both. Our top choice, Peacock Free, boasts 13,000 hours of content drawn from NBC Universal stables brands. This includes TV shows from NBC, Syfy and the US, as well as films from Universal, Focus Features and DreamWorks Animation.Our second choice is Crackle, which has on-demand movies, TV shows and originals. His selection of films is particularly good, with several recognisable titles from recent years. IMDbtv and Tubi are also great on-demand services with extensive lineups of movies and TV shows, plus an easy-to-use interface that lets you browse genres and curated collections. Vudu contains many newer movies because it has the power of Walmart behind it. Plus it's also a digital market so you can rent or buy the latest hits. For live channels, Pluto TV and Sling Free are top options (such as Roku Channel's new live guide, though it's still rolling out for users). You can broadcast surfing just like you do on a cable— scroll through the report to see what's airing. And if there is nothing live streaming that you want to watch, both have on-demand sections to browse the available movies Session. The best free streaming services right now (Picture Comcast / NBC) Live TV: Yes | Originals: Yes | Registration required: No | Supported devices: Android phones and tablets, Android TV, Apple TV, Apple phones and tablets, Chromecast, Comcast Xfinity X1 and Xfinity Flex, LG TV, Playstation 4, Vizio TV, Xbox One, web browsersOn NBC streaming TV is the new power player . It's already a monster, with over 13,000 hours of content for its Peas free tier. This content is top-notch, too. You'll find titles like 30 Rock, Battlestar Galactica, Cheers, Friday Night Lights, Parenthood and Parks and Recreation. The entire Office series will be available later. And there are tons of films to watch, from the Bourne Identity trilogy at Jurassic Park to Shrek. Peacock Free doesn't require you to enter your credit card information, but you'll need to track ads – including ads on Peacock Premium, level with even more programming and originals. Speaking of which, as a peasants free viewer, you can taste the services of originals like Brave New World and Intelligence. There are also live channels based on brands such as Saturday Night Live and The Today Show. If you don't know what to watch, channel the surf and see what's being played at the moment. All in all, we would call Peasants Free to steal – but it costs nothing! Watch Peacock TV here (Image credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: No | Originals: Yes | Registration required: No | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Android phones and tablets, Android TV, Apple TV, Apple phones and tablets, Chromecast, LG TV, Playstation 4, Roku, Samsung TV, Vizio TV, Xbox One, web browserCrackle is a pioneer in free streaming space, starting in 2004 - back when Netflix was still shipping DVDs. Now co-owned by Sony and Chicken Soup for the Soul, Crackle houses free movies and TV shows, and even original programming that sets it apart from most of the other free streaming services on this list. Crackle does not require registration, although the account allows you to add favorites and save progress while watching a movie. The film library is much bigger than the TV one and much more interesting. Available TV shows are the ones you'll find for other services like Roseanne and Hell's Kitchen. In the movies section, you can watch Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Whiskey Tango Foxtrot, Cable Guy, Train to Busan and Star Trek: Generation. Crackle is one of the best free streaming services because it goes further than most, with originals featuring top actors including Martin Freeman, Bryan Cranston and Rupert Grint. Watch Crackle here (Image credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: No | Originals: Yes | Registration required: Yes | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, and through the Amazon Prime Video app on Android phones and tablets, Apple TV, Apple phones and tablets, Chromecast, Playstation 3 and 4, Roku, Xbox and 360, smart TVs, set-top boxes, Blu-ray players, web browsersIMDB (aka Internet Movie Database) was a wonderful resource for filmography. Now owned by Amazon, it is expanded into streaming. The IMDbtv channel automatically comes on fire TV and fire TV sticks. If you have another device, you can access IMDbtv through the Amazon Prime Video app. With amazon's weight behind it, IMDbtv has an impressive library of free on-demand content. Zero Dark Thirty, Rain Man, Gattaca, Amityville Horror and Cloudy with Meatballs are among the recently added movies, giving IMDbtv credibility as one of the best free streaming services. You can also watch Roadhouse, Eat Pray Love, Donnie Darko and Hitch. Television selection consists of typical free shows such as The First 48 and I Dream of Jeannie, but also many episodes of past hits such as Lost, Schitt's Creek, Desperate Housewives and Heroes. And IMDbtv also makes originals like Jay Pharaoh's Special Skills and Animated You're Not a Monster featuring guests like Eric Stonestreet, Patton Oswalt and Amy Sedaris. Watch IMDbtv here (Picture credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: No | Originals: No | Registration required: No | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Android phones and tablets, Apple TV, Apple phones and tablets, Chromecast, Comcast Xfinity X1, Cox Contour, Nvidia Shield, Playstation 3 and 4, Roku, Samsung TV, Sony TV and Blu-ray players, TiVo, Vizio TV, Xbox One, Google Nest, Amazon Echo Show, web browserThink of Tubi as a free version of Netflix, with a library on demand of more than 20,000 movies and TV shows. Of course, Tubi doesn't have newer, high-profile titles that Netflix or Hulu boast, nor originals. But their catalog is still impressive for the free streaming service. Tubi (now owned by Fox Corporation) was able to build it by collaborating with more than 250 providers, including Hollywood heavyweights Paramount, Lionsgate and MGM. Recent available titles include Terminator, Foxcatcher, Kill Bill, Craft and Fruitvale Station.Tubi has a clean, simplified experience. The home page is organized into sections like Recently Added, Family Movies, Action, and Black Cinema. Click on the menu for even more genres and curated collections, including Smart and Cheeky Not on Netflix Area. Even if you don't need to sign up to use Tubi, signing up for an account gives you access to parental controls, queue, and display history. Watch Tubi here (Picture credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: No | Originals: No | Registration required: Yes | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Android Phones and Tablets, Android TV, Apple TV, Apple Phones and Tablets, Chromecast, LG TV, Playstation 4, Roku, Samsung TV, TiVo, Vizio TV, Xbox One, Blu-ray Players, Web BrowserThe Wal-owned Vudu is a digital market, you can buy the latest movies and TV but also stream free content. To use Vudu, you'll need to sign up for an account (or use your Walmart account). Once you do this, you can access more than 10,000 free movies and TV episodes. None of them are new blockbusters, but the choice is better among free streaming services. The film area is better than television, with recent titles including Troy, Prestige, All Is Lost, Hoosiers, Four Weddings and a Funeral. And unlike other free services, Vudu plans to produce original shows such as the Albedo sci-fi series with Evangeline Lilly.The Vudu interface is easy to use. Free content is clearly marked and you can only filter free titles. Ads are about as common as other free services, but tend to be more repetitive (and sometimes uncomfortably interactive, requiring you to choose an option). Watch Vudu here (Image credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: Yes | Originals: No | Registration required: No | Supported devices: All Roku devices and Roku TVs, Android phones and tablets, Apple phones and tablets, Samsung TVsThe Roku Channel app automatically comes with any TV of the year or device, but is also available for download on mobile phones and tablets. You can also access it on the web. The Roku channel doesn't make you sign up for an account (you can watch it as a guest), but registration allows you to continue watching content on another device. Like other services, it offers on-demand movies and TV shows. Roku Channel is also rolling out the new Roku Live TV Guide so viewers can channel surf. The live lineup doesn't feature top name-tag networks, though. On-demand offerings are much more robust, with recognisable TV titles such as Hell's Kitchen, Without a Trace, Growing Pains and Bewitched. Recently available films include Fruitvale Station, Contact, Rumor Has It and Glowing. The best part of The Year Channel is that it streams the first episodes of premium cable shows such as Game of Thrones, Billions, Outlander and Watchmen.Watch The Year Channel here (Image credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: Yes | Originals: No | Registration required: No | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Amazon Kindle and Fire tablets, Android phones and tablets, Android TV, Apple TV, Apple phones and tablets, Chromecast, Roku, web browsersO viacom-owned Pluto TV has a decent selection of on-demand movies and shows, but where it really shines is in live TV streaming. Viewers can browse live channels in a grid, similar to the cable GUIDE. The lineup draws heavily from Viacom's other features, so you can tune into TV Land Drama, BET Her, MTV Teen and VH1 Reality. They also offer other recognizable brands like CNN and Fox Sports - though those run curated clips, not the actual live broadcasts you'd see if you watched on cable. Pluto's interface is and simple: just switch between live and on-demand. Both organized into categories, so it's easy to find the type of content you want to watch. Yes, there are ads, but no more than what you would get watching cable. And Pluto TV doesn't even require registration, although users can have special features if they sign up for an account, such as the ability to identify favorite channels and continue watching the program on another device. Watch Pluto TV here (Image credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: Yes | Originals: No | Registration required: No | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Android phones and tablets, Roku, web browserSling is one of the best live TV streaming services on the market at $30 per month for 50-plus channels. Lately, they rolled out free space with live and on-demand content. There aren't tons of free live channels and aside from ABC News, most of them are not recognizable names. The on-demand area has more content, although you'll find many of the same TV titles that can be found on other free services such as Forensic Files, Hell's Kitchen, Unsolved Secrets, Roseanne and 3rd Rock From the Sun. The film section is even less exciting: Recent titles include Crocodile, Dry, Illusionist and Double Identity. Sling Free seems like another way to get those interested in paid subscription plans. Watch Sling Free here (Image credit: Tom's Guide) Live TV: Yes | Originals: No | Registration required: No | Supported devices: Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Android phones and tablets, Android TV, Apple phones and tablets, Comcast Xfinity X1, Playstation 4, Roku, smart TVs, web browserXumo is another free streaming system with live and on-demand content. The app comes on several major smart TV brands and can also be downloaded on Roku, iOS and Android. Registration is not required. Xumo offers more than 190 channels, including top brands such as NBC News, Fox Sports, Funny or Die and TMZ. The main xumo experience is a guide to the type of grid, just as you would with cable TV. You can watch live as you channel surf. The on-demand area lists all channels broken down by genre. However, the interface does not tell you what TV shows are available. It looks like Xumo has the usual free fare: 21 Jump Street, forensic files, a family feud and an unresolved mystery. The mobile app has at least a movies tab that you can browse. Watch Xumo hereHow to choose the best free streaming service for you Fortunately, since they are all free, you don't have to choose just one of the best free streaming services. However, it can be difficult to balance many different applications and want to focus on just one or two. The first consideration should be whether you want to be able to watch live channels. If that's the case, you should use Pluto TV, Sling Free, Xumo, Peacock or check to see if the year channel's new live TV guide is available for you. If you only care movies and TV shows on-demand, then try Peasants, Crackle, IMDbtv, Tubi or Vudu. Selecting content is the second major thing that distinguishes free streaming services from each other. In addition to Peasants, with a library of name-brand content, almost all of them have the same core of free TV shows as Hell's Kitchen and Roseanne. But some, like Crackle and Vudu, have more robust film libraries. Others provide access to top past shows such as IMDbtv and Roku Channel. So, check out the available titles and see if the streamer has options that concern you. After all, even if these services are free, it doesn't mean they have things you want to watch.
