The Spanish alphabet - by agreement of the 22 member countries of the Association of Spanish Academies on 28 November 2010 at the Guadalajara International Book Fair - was changed as follows: Ch and ll, which had previously ceased to be considered letters for alphabetization purposes, but remained the letters of the alphabet, now officially excluded from the Spanish alphabet , leaving the Spanish alphabet only with the following 27 letters (26 letters of the English alphabet, as well as the letter written e'e and pronounced as EH-nyay). Official Spanish alphabet: a, b, c, g, e, f, g, h, i, j, k, l, m, n, q, o, p, q, r, s, t, u, v, w, x, y, z. Letters are: a (a), be (b), ce (c), de (d), e (e), efe (f), ge (g), hache, ele (l), eme (l), eme (l), , pe (n), ku (d), erte (g), ese (s), te (t), u (u), uwe (v), doble uve (w), equis (x), ye (y), zeta (z) Spanish pronunciation of the title of the letter - how to pronounce the Spanish alphabet-it's next manner: AH (a), BAY (b), SAY in Spain (c), DAY (d), EY (e), EH-fay (f) , HAY (g), AH-chay (h), EE (j), HOH-tah (j), KAH (k), EH-lay (l), EH-may (m) , EH-nay (n), EH-nyay (j), OH (o), PAY (p), COO (q), EH-rray (r), EH-say (s), TAY (t), OOH (u), OOH-bay (v), DOH-blay OOH-bay (w), EH-kees (x), YAY (y), SAY-tah in Spain (y). These pronunciations are written in such a way that it will allow English speakers to pronounce these Spanish letters of names as correctly as possible. For example, an English speaker seeing a bay tends to pronounce the English word bay (which would be correct), but a Spanish speaker seeing the bay will read it as resembling an English word yet (which would be incorrect). EY here means sound in Hey; EH means short e, as in EFF (f), or EM (m). Changes in the name of the letters: According to the data on November 28, 2010, W is now officially called doble uve (although in the past it was also called uve doble, doble ve and doble u), and Y is now officially called ye (although it was traditionally called i griega . Greek i). These new official Spanish letters are considered recommendations, not requirements (i.e. traditional letter names are not considered wrong), but the expectation of Real Academia Espa'ola (Spanish Royal Academy, or RAE) is that teachers will teach the official version, which, according to the RAE, should make things easier for Spanish students, especially because each letter will now have only one. and that name will be the same in every Hispanic country. For information on how to pronounce these letters when they appear in words (as opposed to the pronunciation of their names), see the pronunciation guide in Spanish Pronto!: Basic research references Please send comments or suggestions, or questions about Spanish, chris@spanishpronto.com URL: Copyright ©1998-2019 Revised -- 2019-09-19 The first thing we learn when we learn a foreign language alphabet - ideally, now we can spell the word, but ... Can you pronounce those words for sure? Funny. We teach languages to speak not a spell! However, very few of us learn to produce the sounds of the target language. You've probably heard that in Spanish, we pronounce the words as we spell them. It's a lie. Some people may disagree and they will say: Spanish is a phonetic language and they are quite right. However, less than half the letters of the Spanish alphabet are always pronounced the way they are written. It's mathematics: The Spanish alphabet has 27 letters. There are at least 34 sounds in (European) Spanish. Some letters are pronounced in the same way. In other words. There's more than one way to pronounce most letters like the letters B, C or N. If you want to avoid boring people to tears, if you want to have a cursory conversation and not forcing people to put too much effort into it (so people pay attention to you), you should be able to speak clearly. And it's much easier if you know how to produce Spanish sounds. Today you will see the letters and sounds of Spanish: Examples of Spanish words for every sound. English words that contain this particular Spanish sound (or similar). Audio. Because if we're talking about sounds, you should be able to listen to them. International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA) to learn how to read any word in Spanish, even if it is the first time you see it. The final image to summarize all the information. When you pronounce Spanish, usually your muscle mouth tester than when you speak English.Pronunciation Spanish alphabett would be confusing if you learn how to pronounce every Spanish dialect. And it's going to take a lot longer. So I'm going to focus on Castilian Spanish - the standard European Spanish.To understand the table below: The first column: The letters of the Spanish alphabet and their names in brackets. Second column: International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA). The symbol in this column is a certain sound - usually common in more than a language. In order to make it easier, I replaced some IPA sounds. For example, we'll use the letter instead of ɲ - let's keep things simple. Third column: Examples of Spanish words for this particular sound and audio. Examples of English words that contain a certain sound (or similar). When the sound is not quite the same, you will find this symbol (~).
