When I saw him, I noticed he had a haircut. When I saw him, I noticed he had a haircut. The action (haircut) occurred before other past actions (I noticed). We use the past perfectly for actions that occurred in the first place to make the order of time clear to the listener. He told me he was in London. He told me he was in London. His original words were: I 2015 in London. However, in the speech reported we move the tense back - the present perfect (were) becoming past perfect perfect there were). There are several uses (functions) of Simple's past: 1 Past Simple for completed actions in the past Use past simple (VERB-ed or irregular verbs) to express the idea that the action began and ended at a certain time in the past. It is not necessary to mention a specific time, but it is implied in the form of a verb. I saw a great movie yesterday. I didn't see Peter at the party last night. I went to Milan last month. Didn't you go to Thailand a month ago? He painted his bedroom red. 2 A few completed actions We use past Just talk about a series of actions in the past that happened in chronological order. I finished my job at five, went to my favorite coffee shop and spent an hour just watching the world go by. First boil the water, then add the ingredients. 3 Past - The duration of Past Simple can be used to talk about duration that begins and stops in the past. I lived in Spain for two years. I studied Italian when I was in high school. They didn't stay in Paris for very long. I talked to him on the phone for half an hour. 4 Habits in the past Simple past can also be used to describe a habit that has stopped in the past. It can be as important as it is used. To make it clear that we are talking about habit, we often add expressions such as: always, often, usually never when I was a kid, when I was younger, etc. I did judo when I was a kid. He didn't play the guitar, he played the piano. He worked in a restaurant when he was at university.
