New players who pick up the mobile version of Pokemon quest in luck. Since the game came out more than a month earlier on Nintendo Switch, a whole bunch of tips and tricks for Pokemon quest have been discovered. Related: What is Pokemon Home and how does it work? There's even more good news. We've put together these Pokemon quest tips and tricks in a neat little list that will get any aspiring Pokemon masters well on their way to Happenstance Island. Without further ado, here's the list. Always be cookingThe most obvious advice for Pokemon quest is to keep your pans boiling constantly. Never go out on an expedition without cooking something, even if it's just Mulligan Stew a la Cube, the cafeteria porridge Tumblecube Island. Even if you're just doing a Mulligan stew, avoid using an automatic feature set. It tends to use all your most precious ingredients (including a rainbow issue) just to leave you with a big bowl of frustration. One of the best sources for Pokemon quest recipes will sound familiar to Pokemon fans, as it is a go site for all things Pokemon. Serebii breaks each recipe by rarity and potential Pokemon attracts. It will still take some time to get the Pokemon you're looking for, but after a while you'll have your favorite recipes remembered. As for the ingredients, that takes us to our next tip. Get CusheonsYou might think that if you paid 30 bucks for an expedition three pack, you'd be rolling in the ingredients. But the packages also unlock three extra cooking pans. In order to keep all of them going, you need to increase your drops even more. Three Eevee themed Cusheons (and less attractively named Dodrio tents) are a cheap way to boost your drops early. Even free play players can afford the 200pm tickets they cost in the first few days of the game. As for the rest of your tickets, they're better spent on a battery of refills50 percent more ingredients may not seem like much, but the sooner you get it the sooner it starts paying dividends. You'll be kicking yourself if you wait until you start unlocking the higher level of cooking pots. As for the rest of the tickets, they are better spent on battery recharge. You can save up for more expensive decorations, but you'll have more fun progressing into the game first. Use your high level cooking pots This may seem counter intuitive to use the highest cooking pans in the Pokemon quest, since it will quickly eat through your supplies of ingredients. However, if you can afford it, you should because it comes with all kinds of benefits. All, higher levels of pots bring in higher levels of Pokemon. Significantly higher, actually. So high that every time you unlock a new cooking pot, any of the Pokemon it brings in will be 20 or even 30 levels higher than your strongest Pokemon. Pokemon attracts a higher level level pots have higher basic statistics. They may not have better movements, but higher levels mean more unlocked power stones, leading to real power. These new Pokemon will quickly replace your previous line-up. If they are really just bad, higher levels of Pokemon also give more experience when learning. On top of this, Pokemon attracts a higher level of cooking pots have higher basic stats. It's not a huge amount, just a few hundred, but it's enough to make a difference. Don't go for a variety of earlylt understandable that you would come into a Pokemon quest with a catch them all mentality, but in practice it's much better to stick to one or two types of Pokemon. This means that you end up with four, five or more of the same Pokemon. The reason why it's good that you can use these Pokemon to train your strongest one, or just swap them if the new one is stronger or has the best special move. There's no such thing as linking to Pokemon in the Pokemon quest, so feel free to regularly give loafers a download. At some point there are just too many meats to feed at Base Camp. Using the same type or species as training feed greatly increases the amount of experience by cooking. So you can align your Pokemon much faster training than, go out on an expedition. It's definitely a change of pace for the series cycle through Pokemon so fast, but you have to spend precious PM Tickets to expand your Pokemon Box. At some point there are just too many Meowths to feed at camp. Prioritize Pokemon with one move Pokemon come in all shapes and sizes, but in order to maximize its effectiveness in the Pokemon quest, stick to a single pony trick. When you end up resorting to using automatic mode to grind battles, Pokemon with only one step will always use... Well, that step. Even if your pokemon starts with the wrong move, a quick change of course can set them correctly. Another advantage of a single move is that it opens more slots to move the stones. These stones have huge (even game) effects. Sometimes it's worth investing a little time and energy in Pokemon with the right moveset. Use the types of level bonuses In normal Pokemon games, you can usually power through most of the game, front loading all your strength into one Pokemon. But not in the Pokemon quest. After beating the first few levels, you will work in a seemingly irresistible poke-pain wall. The best way to overcome the boss's hard fights is to use Pokemon that match the bonus type of this level. Types work differently in the Pokemon quest. Instead of relying on super effective hits, the game provides a flat bonus to and defense when used at the right levels. Since these statistics are the basic ones that matter, you can be better off with a team of three high-level Pokemon of the same type for certain levels. As we approach the end of the However, you want to put a little more effort into choosing the right Pokemon. The last two levels don't have bonus types at all, so you need to be a little more creative. Watch the bonusAs expedition you complete the expedition, the expedition bonus bar in the top left will fill. Once it is full, at the next level you will complete the fall of a rare power stone. Watch out for it while you are grinding, and make sure you play at the highest level available when the expedition bonus is active. More complex levels mean stronger drops of stone power, and power stones are very important in the Pokemon quest. If you're not sure you can beat the level, try anyway. You have nothing to lose. A failed expedition does not drain your expedition bonus, so it can still be picked up at the next attempt. Notice the bingo bonuses Bingo bonuses are a bit of a hidden stat, which can have a huge impact on the end of the game's strength of your Pokemon. Each Pokemon has different bonuses, even if they are the same species. Bingo bonuses are essentially stat boosts that are unlocked, having three power charms equipped in a row. For bingo lovers there, no, horizontal lines don't count. The Tic-tac-toe bonus just doesn't have the same ring to it. Be on the look for bingo bonuses like a flat attack, reducing cooling on special moves, or increasing attacks on special moves. Some resistance may be useful on some Pokemon tank as well. Massive up and sharing a stonelf you remember anything from this list of tips and tricks for Pokemon quest, let it be so. Use Pokemon with buff as bulk, and equip it with as many exchange stones as you have. Exchange stones give the rest of your team a 25 percent bonus statistic that the original move gives. Bulk up gives a bonus for both attack and defense, which, again, are the main stats that matter in the Pokemon quest. You might think that the type of Pokemon support will make your overall damage weaker, but in fact the opposite is true. Losing one bad move in more than something is to increase the damage and health of your entire team. Using a bulk Machamp with three exchange stones, I was able to easily clear levels with the recommended strength command more than 50 percent higher than my current strength. If you are unable to find Pokemon with bulk, any polishing moves will work. Power Stones are the key to progressionHere another strange fad Pokemon quest: for most of the game, the basic stats of your Pokemon don't really matter. They matter when you're trying to maximize everything at the end of the game, but for progression, it's all about power stones. At each point of the game, the vast majority of your Pokemon strength and defense will come from power stones. Evolution a small burst of power, but the levels give only a few minor stat benefits. They do, however, unlock more slots for power stones. Hit Hit is the most important special stat for power stones When you farm more and more stones, you need to expand your power stone box at least a few times. Three Pokemon with nine stones each, plus move stones, adds up to a lot of storage space. You also don't want to be recycling old power stones after every match. Be careful what power stones you recycle because not all their power comes from pure numbers. Special stats to provide can be just as useful. Hit healing - like life steal in other games - is the most important thing. Hit healing is crucial to the survival of all the waves leading to the boss scene. It covers at 10 percent, but any power stone even a small percentage should be stored for a long time. Don't recycle them if you have a better hit healing stones to replace them. Pokemon quest tips and tricks that are all for this list of Pokemon quest tips and tricks. Do you have any more advice? Let us know in the comments! Related As you probably already know, the world is now facing an epidemic of Pokemon due to the release of Pokemon Go, a new augmented reality game that has sent everyone away from your younger sister Chrissy Teigen on a quest to catch them all. The mobile app, which can be downloaded from the Android or iOS store, works by tracking your location so you find and catch Pokemon based on where you are IRL. That's literally everything you hoped for and dreamed of. I mean, come on, if that's not a sign that we're living in the future, I don't know what is. Since we can't trade Pokemon yet, we need to get cunning when it comes to getting Ahold new Pokemon. Fortunately, the app lets you develop your pokemon, which happens to be a great way to get new Pokemon that you may not have learned in the wild, or, you know, in your backyard. So, if you caught every Eevee in sight and are currently wondering how to develop one of them into a Pokemon cooler way like Vaporeon or Flareon, you've come to the right place. Follow the steps below to turn your Pokemon into a bigger, badder, and better Pokemon. Get CandyIn in order to develop your Pokemon, you have to have a certain amount of candy. Each candy is specific to each type of Pokemon and their evolution. For example, if you're trying to develop Pidgey, you'll need 12 Pidgey Candy. Once you evolve Pidgey to Pidgeotto, however, you will still need Pidgey candy to evolve Pidgeotto into Pidgeot. Each Pokemon also needs a different amount of candy to develop. Poliwhag only needs 25 Poliwhag Candy, but if you're trying to develop Magikarp, good luck: you need 400 Magikarp Candy. You get this candy through catching Pokemon within the evolution line that you v. You can also get one candy through the transmission of these Pokemon that can be done by selecting the Pokemon you want to pass and clicking by clicking at the bottom of the page. You can find out how many candies you have by going to any of these Pokemon separate information pages. It will tell you how many candies you need under the height and weight of Pokemon. Choose Pokemon, if you have enough candy to develop Pokemon, you probably have a ton of the same type of Pokemon to choose from. However, you can choose carefully since you lose the candy when you develop one of your Pokemon. A good way to decide which one to develop is by choosing the strongest. The more CP, or combat power, Pokemon, the more likely it is to win the battle. So even if you can really be tied to the first Venonat you caught that only 10 CP, it will be wiser to develop the other Venonat you have that has 219 CP. To choose the Pokemon you want, go to all your Pokemon and click on the one you want to evolve. This will lead you to their individual information page where you can develop them. Evolve Your PokemonOnce you have enough candy and have chosen exactly which Pokemon you want to evolve, all you need to do now is press a button that says: Evolution. If there is a button with the name Evolve, but it will not allow you to choose it, it is probably because you do not have enough candy. It should say in red how many candies you need to develop your Pokemon. But, if the option is not available at all, it means that your pokemon is the latest evolution in the line and can not be turned into another Pokemon. If the button lets you click on it, however, the candy you've accumulated will be spent and your Pokemon will turn into the next Pokemon in the evolution line. Now you have a super cool new Pokemon to add to your Pokedex. Hopefully these tips will help you on your quest to be the best like no one has ever been. Images: Screenshot; Pokemon Go; Gifi Gifi
