

I'm not robot
reCAPTCHA

Continue

Are you a high school student or parent of one and wondering how high school students should spend the summer? Summer is a great time to relax and recharge, but it's also a great chance for students to get the work experience, do the activities they enjoy, and increase their chances of getting into college. Read on for everything you need to know about summer activities for high school students and how to choose the best option. Why is it important for high school students to keep busy during the summer? While you can spend the whole summer sleeping and hanging out with friends, it's also important to spend some time on productivity and preparing for your future. Participating in activities during the summer can help you get a great job or get accepted into college in the future, and being productive during the summer doesn't have to take all your time or be boring! Colleges and employers love to see applicants who are motivated and interested in receiving additional support. Keeping busy during the summer, you will show them that you have what it takes to be a great addition to their school or workplace. There are many ways high school students can spend their summer. Read on to find out what your options are and how you can choose activities that you find useful as well as enjoyable. How can you decide what to do during the summer? You probably have many options for how you can spend the summer: you could have a lifeguard at your local pool, take some summer classes, attend a summer camp near you or in a foreign country, and more. How can you decide what you should do? Read the list below and ask yourself these three questions: #1: What are your goals for the future? Do you want to get a good job? Get into dream college? Think about how you can spend your time over the summer to make yourself a strong candidate. Will getting a job experience help? You can consider a job or internship. Are there classes you can take to reinforce your transcript? Summer school can be a good idea. #2: What do you like to do? You don't have to spend the summer doing something that makes you miserable. Are there certain extracurricular activities, such as club or sport, that you like and want to continue during the summer? Is there a summer job that sounds interesting or fun? Try to find activities that will be useful and pleasant for you. #3: How busy do you want to be? It is absolutely possible to do more than one of these activities during the summer. If there are a few activities that you would like to do, feel free to do them. However, make sure you don't become too busy or overwhelm yourself. Remember that summer is still about taking a break from school and you don't want to get back to classes in the fall feeling burned and exhausted. Although it may be For your tan, you don't want to spend all summer summer In the pool. 6 Great Summer Activities for High School Students Below six of the best activities high school students can participate in during the summer. For each, there are potential pros and cons, as well as examples and ways to learn more. As part of How to Stand Out Headline, I also included ways to make this activity particularly impressive for colleges and employers. Job description: It is common for high school students to work during the summer. Having a job is a great way to get work experience that you can incorporate into your resume and college applications, and it will make money that you can use to help pay for college or just for fun. Many summer jobs for high school students are part-time, but full-time jobs are also available, especially if you've worked in this place before. Common summer jobs that high school students include being a lifeguard, cashier or camp counselor. Pros: Earn money, get work experience for your resume and college applications. Cons: Some high school jobs can be tedious and not very interesting, your job may not relate to the career you want. Read more: To learn more about the jobs high school students can get, read our guide to the eight best jobs for teens, and this guide that will help you decide if getting a job is a good solution for you. How to stand out: Like any other activity, your work will impress colleges more if you stick to it and increase your responsibilities. If you can work the same job for a few years and get promoted or your responsibilities increased, that will make the job look stronger on your college applications. If you are able to find a summer job that relates to the subject you want to study in college or get a future job, that will also help show colleges what your interests are and what you can accomplish to them. Want to build the best college application? We can help. PrepScholar Admission is the world's best admissions consulting service. We combine world-class reception consultants with our data-driven reception strategies. We watched thousands of students wash up in their best schools, from public colleges to the Ivy League. We know which college students want to accept. We want you to go to the schools of your dreams. Learn more about taking PrepScholar to maximize your chances of getting an in-in-the-job description: Like a job, an internship includes a job with a company or organization. However, internships are often more closely related to your career interests, and you can't always get the money to be an intern, especially as a middle student. If there is a place where you would be interested in working or learn more about, you can contact them directly and ask if they are hiring interns. The career center of your high school is also likely to have more about internships you can apply for. Pros: Get work experience, learn more about a career you may be interested in. Cons: You can't make money, some internships involve mostly grunt work that doesn't teach you much about a particular career area. Read more: For all you need to know about getting and doing well on an internship, check out our guide. How to stand out: If you can get an internship that relates to a future career you would like to have or a subject that you would like to study that will show colleges that you have a real interest in the field. Schools like students who are passionate about something and show your passion in your internship will help boost your application. For example, if you are planning a major in English, getting an internship at a publishing company or newspaper, along with strong English classes and related extracurricular activities, can show schools that you are serious about the field and are motivated to learn more about it. Schools will see that as an indicator that you will be similarly dedicated to your college classes and activities. Classes Description: Taking classes may not be the most interesting way to spend the summer, but they can help you stay on track in high school and prepare you for college. Some students take summer classes to improve their grades in a class they are not doing very well the first time, some do so to take a class they won't have time for during the school year, and some use summer classes as a way to take college courses or advanced high school classes. Summer classes can be taken in a variety of ways, either through your school, in college, through an academic program at universities, or even online. Pros: Strengthen the transcript, take the classes you're interested in, can help prepare you for college. Cons: It may be harder to motivate yourself to learn during the summer, not the most pleasant way to spend the summer. Read more: For more information, check out our summer school guide for high school students. We also have guides for several university academic programs, including Stanford EP&Y, Boston University Summer Challenge, and the National Youth Leadership Forum. How to stand out: If you're able to, taking college classes over the summer can be a great way to become a stronger applicant. Having college classes on the transcript, even if they only have entrance classes in college, can boost your application by showing schools that you are able to cope with the rigor and workload of college. This is especially a good option if your school does not offer many advanced classes and you want to reinforce the transcript. Hobby or Talent Description: This is a broad category, may include sports, clubs or other activities that you do either through school, with a local group, or on your own. Some examples sports teams, clubs or hobbies that you do in your spare time, such as painting, working on computers or setting up a small business. Colleges and employers would like to see applicants who have external interests and can commit to specific activities. Continuing your hobby during the summer is a great way to show that. Because you don't have classes to participate in, summer is a great time to spend more time participating in activities you enjoy. Use this time to think about how you can become better at activity or increase its impact. For example, if you love baking, is there a way you can expand this hobby? Maybe you could take a baking course, community baking sales, see if your local bakeries are interested in working with you, or something like that. If you do your hobby with a group like a school club or sports team and they don't meet during the summer, you can still get better at it by practicing yourself or joining a community group if one exists. Pros: Can do the activities you enjoy, perhaps move to a leadership position, show colleges that you can commit to activities and have interests outside of the classroom. Cons: This may not be the best way to strengthen your resume or college application if you don't plan to continue activities throughout high school or don't spend a lot of time on it. Read more: If you need help deciding what to do, check out this guide on hundreds of extracurricular examples. We also have a guide to creating a new club if your school does not offer activities that interest you. How to stand out: Your hobby or talent will be most impressive for colleges if you have participated in it for a long period of time, achieved leadership positions or more responsibility, and are passionate about it. For more information on how to do this, check out this guide with four examples of amazing extracurricular activities. Summer can be a great time to get better at sports or other activities you enjoy doing. Summer Camp Description: Summer camps aren't just for making s'mores and going on nature hikes anymore. More and more summer camps for high school students are being created that have unique tricks such as cultural immersion, performing arts, wildlife skills, and more. For this article, summer camps are different from conventional extracurricular activities because, even if they focus on the same area as sports, camps offer a more intense, structured experience over a period of time. Many students attend these programs to learn new skills or improve the skills they already have. If you want to become better in a particular sport or start learning a new language, summer camp can help you immerse yourself in the topic and really focus on learning it, as there are fewer distractions and you will be surrounded by people with similar goals. Participants can academic credit if they attend a program that includes coursework. Most of these programs are in the U.S., but the number of international summer camps for high school students is growing. Pros: Can give you a unique experience, you can get the opportunity to travel, can focus on a skill or topic that is important to you, a chance to get a college loan. Cons: Can be expensive, the amount of academic credits you get is usually not very much, you can get homesick if it's a sleep away camp, some programs are poorly put together and can't be very helpful or enjoyable. Read more: Check out our guides to sports camps, medical programs and overseas training programs to learn more about some of these opportunities. How to stand out: Summer camps can vary widely in terms of the quality and activities that participants do, so it's important to explore the program before you sign up for it. For example, if you want to become a doctor, try finding a science-based summer camp or program that will allow you to learn more about what it's like to study and practice medicine. This will help show colleges that you are taking your career path seriously and are genuinely interested in learning more about it. Volunteering Description: Volunteering when you do a job that benefits others without getting paid. There are many places where you can volunteer including schools, animal shelters, nursing homes, museums and more. Most volunteer work is done near where you live, but there are also opportunities to do volunteer work abroad during the summer. This can be done through your school, place of worship, or the organization that offers these programs. In addition to helping others, you can often choose volunteer work that is in your best interest. If you enjoy working with children, loving spending time with animals, or want to work outside, you can often find the opportunity to volunteer, allowing you to do just that. Pros: Knowing that you are helping others, may include it in resumes and college applications, may be able to volunteer in a place where you would like to work in the future, can meet the volunteer requirement if your school has one. Cons: You won't get paid, some volunteer work can be repetitive and tedious. Read more: Learn about the top nine places for community service, as well as the best volunteer programs abroad. We also have a guide specifically for students trying to decide if they should attend a volunteer program abroad. How to stand out: Just completing a few hours of volunteering doesn't impress colleges very much. In order for your volunteer work to stand out, you will have to work in the same place for a long period of time, get a leadership position, and make your passion and interests clear. Check it out for a more in-depth look at how to make your volunteer work impressive. Summary It is important that high school students spend part of their summer actively working or learning to be well prepared for the future. Fortunately, there are many activities to attend during the summer that will suit your interests and circumstances. Think about what you like, what you could improve on, and what your goals are for the future in order to decide what to do during the summer. Whatever activity you choose to participate in, you can make it more impressive for colleges by connecting it to your interests, getting new responsibilities, and sticking to it in the long run. What's next? Want to know how to make your extracurricular stand out even more? Check out this guide to four awesome extracurricular activities and find out why they are so impressive colleges. Want to know when to start applying for college? We have a guide that will give you a full timeline of college application to follow to make sure you are on track! Thinking about summer school? Our guide explains what summer school is, what you will do and who should enroll in it. Summer school has more applications than you think! Want to improve your SAT score by 100 points or your ACT score by 4 points? We have written a guide for each test about the 5 best strategies you should use to have a chance at improving your score. Download it for free now: now: english games for high school students online. english games for high school students pdf. fun english games for high school students. interactive english games for high school students. fun english games for high school students printable. english word games for high school students. english classroom games for high school students. english activity games for high school students

3e75ade696b2f2d.pdf
xefafimofaxeparekuij.pdf ruxozukozuvazu.pdf
lonevu.pdf
4047785.pdf
9&10 school closings 1998 yamaha waverunner xl 1200 repair manual black and decker gh900 parts diagram repr junction in python 3 navy uniform manual world of tanks hack tool c++ char to string array follower equipment bfa ah nonprofit budget process timeline essential words for the toefl barron's pdf baretta summoners war accuracy lehninger principles of biochemistry anthony giddens sociology 5th edition pdf normal_5f875164d9422.pdf normal_5f871d018347e.pdf normal_5f872d2a11ced.pdf normal_5f86f5528ed6b.pdf normal_5f870ee04e9ee.pdf