Download the movie to watch is a fun activity mostly no matter where you live. It's relatively do, you can share the experience with friends, and with movies of terrific box office revenue each year, movies are as big as they've ever been. Watching movies is also never Easier. You can look at your phone, tablet, computer, TV or local cinema. This means that there is a metric ton of movie apps that do all kinds of different things. Let's take a look at the best movie apps for Android! Of course, you can always Google Search Movies as well. Google search is very well configured for movies with Showtimes, trailers, cast, and other details. We would also like to give an honorable mention of Letterboxd (Google Play link). It is a social network for film and film lovers to meet, talk about, and recommend movies to each other. Social networking is hard to recommend in general, especially when there are subreddits for this exact thing, but it is something to think about. CineTrakPrice: Free/$3.99-$99.99CineTrak is a movie and TV show tracking app. You enter all the movies and shows what you've watched, and the app tracks them for you. It also works as a detection platform for shows and movies that you may like. It captures reviews and information from IMDb, Trakt, Metacritic, and Rotten Tomatoes. The user interface is fairly easy to use, and the app is an interesting way to get a review of your movie experience. The base price is $3.99, but it scales from there. The $99.99 version comes with a top contributor icon and codes for a few other people, so you can buy and share if you want. Criterion ChannelPrice: Free trial /$10.99 per month/$99.99 per year Criterion Channel is a specialized film streaming service. It has a bunch of Hollywood blockbusters, as you'd expect. However, it also has a collection of indie films, international films and art-house stuff. So it's a great way to expose yourself to the next few layers below what you'll find in theaters. The service is a bit expensive and the app needs a bit of work, but we like the basic idea a lot and the bugs are usually temporary. Netflix DVD or RedboxPrice: Free trial/$7.99-$14.99 per month DVD Netflix and Redbox are movie apps for DVD rentals and Blu-ray. DVD Netrix has plans as low as $7.99 per month and range to $14.99 per month. Redbox comes with a day-to-day rental structure. For those who rarely watch movies, Redbox may be better, but movie buffs will get more from a Netflix DVD subscription for the price. Either way, you rent a movie, watch it and then return it when you did just like you did with Blockbuster back in the day. Both services work quite well most of the time. Google TVPrice: Free/Film and Show Price varyGoogle TV (formerly Google Play Movies and TV) is one of the best movie streaming apps on Android. You buy movies and TV shows and then stream them as often as you want. You can also download for offline if necessary. There are several great apps for this, including Vudu, Amazon Prime Video, and others. However, for Android users, we like to play movies because it is related to your Google account, it is it is 4K is streaming (on some movies) and it's fairly easy to use. However, if you are already using one of these other services by all means, keep using it. HooplaPrice: FreeHoopla is a unique app. This is directly related to the local library. The library card credentials can be used to watch movies, TV shows, books, music, and comics. The whole service is free and you can check out as much media as you want. That makes it great for movie watchers on a budget. The app also includes Chromecast support, Android TV support, and special comic book viewing features. The only downside is your local library should be part of the Hoopla network for its operation. IMDbPrice: FreeIMDb is an excellent all-in-one movie app. You can find reviews, information, trailers, actor information, and other amusing content like behind-the-scenes clips. It even supports things like local Showtimes, ticket purchases, and more. You can get all these things from individual services. For example, most entertainment blogs cover news movies and apps such as Flixster sells tickets. However, we understand that IMDb can basically do it all. Some people don't like ads, but everything else is good. If you want movie news, Feedly, Flipboard, or other news aggregates, probably a little better option. Movies AnywherePrice: Free / Movie Prices varyMovies Everywhere is an exceptional movie app. It allows you to log in to Google, Vudu, Amazon Prime Video, Xfinity and other accounts. You can then watch any movies that you have purchased in any of these services. This eliminates the exclusivity of one app and allows you to play on the field when it comes to selling movies or promotional offers. The app is completely free and comes with basics like Chromecast support. It still has a few quirks to run and it needs 4K support, but it's otherwise a great movie app. PlexPrice: Free/$0.99/$3.99 per monthPlex is one of the best movie apps for anyone with a local film collection. You can turn your computer into a Plex server and watch movies on almost any device. Plex has an Android app as well as apps for most modern consoles. You also get Chromecast support so you can watch it and control it right from your phone. This is easily the best method in its genre for this kind of thing. The subscription service adds a bunch of extra content if you want it. Finally, Plex partnered with Crackle in 2020 to provide ad-supported (but otherwise free) movies on its free service. It only strengthens its position as one of the great Film. PopcornTriviaPrice: FreemiumPopcornTrivia is a trivia game for movie lovers. He emulates the question-and-answer style of those movie quizzes they work in the theater before the trailers begin to play. It offers trivia on a bunch of movies in many genres. The questions also have varying complexity. Developers add new questions and it's a good companion to film a night at home or while you're in the theater. Also, the game is just fun. TubiPrice: Free (with ads) Tubi is one of the few 100% legal movie streaming services. It uses advertising to generate revenue instead of a subscription model, and thus it's great for watching movies on a budget. It supports both TV shows and movies. It also adds new content every week. The app also comes with feature favorites, a queue to the watch list, and other streaming support services. Most of its users don't even complain about advertisements.Netflix, Hulu, Amazon Prime VideoPrice: Free trials /services vary in priceTraditional streaming services perfectly called for movies. Most of them focus on TV shows because those are a little more binge friendly. However, Hulu, Netflix, Amazon Prime Video, VRV and others have a good selection of movie content as well. Some channel apps, such as HBO and Disney, love to hoard their content for their own streaming services, so if you don't find what you like on mainstream video streaming services, try HBO, STAR and Disney. Your local theater appPrice: Free / VariesMany major theater companies have apps for frequent guests. Most of these apps have the same features. You can check movie time, watch trailers, buy tickets, buy tickets at the theater, and most of them also have a rewards program for frequent movie visitors. We don't care which one you go with, and you're probably stuck with what's near you anyway. However, we found apps for AMC Theaters, Regal Cinemas, Cinemark Theaters, Marcus Theaters, and some others with a major Google Play Store search. Fandango, Flixter, Atom TicketsPrice: Free / VariesFandango, Flixster and Atom Tickets, among others, represent a secondary segment of ticket sales in movie apps. They usually offer the same features, including being in the movies, buying tickets, and more. You can also check out movie news, trailers, some behind-the-scenes footage, and other stuff. We think IMDb does it a little better than these movie apps. We also recommend that you go with a dedicated movie theater app above them to sell tickets. However, these are useful, useful applications that work well most of the time. If you want movie news, Feedly, Flipboard, or other news aggregates, probably a little better option.
