This historically rich state is well known for its beautiful temples, vibrant culture and of course, the meaningless Madras jokes we hear in the movies. The capital of the country Chennai is a lively center of activity. From the horde of MNC to the ancient temples, Chennai got it all. It is therefore not surprising that a large number of educated people migrate to cities such as Chennai and Coimbatore mainly for work, which in turn has increased the demand for rental properties there. Which brings us to the point of this article, how do you make a lease in the cities of Tamil Nadu? Over 11 months it depends on the amount of annual rent plus safety security 1% of the total amount is stamp duty. If the required stamp duty has not been paid, if there is any dispute and the case is heard in court, the parties involved may have to pay almost ten times more than the actual stamp duty. Electronic stamping in Tamil Nadu electronic punching is widely practiced in Chennai while it is not much to use in other cities. Easily available in several locations across the city, the e-Stamp Papers were launched in late 2010 and is now a popular choice. They are currently issued and regulated by the Board of India Limited Stock Holding (SHCIL). They are linked to various banks to provide an electronic paper stamp to the public. Registration of the document registration means recording the contents of the document in the authorized office/official. This gives you advantages that simply cannot be overlooked. First- Registration puts the document in the public domain, preventing counterfeiting and fraud does not occur. Types of leases are commonly used by an 11-month lease - probably one of the most widely used leases across the country. This type of agreement lasts exactly 11 months and is renewed at the end of the term. Registration for such agreements is generally not considered because of their short duration. Commercial Rent - Signed for business purposes between landlords and or between two businesses, commercial rentals are the kind of business that do not have a pre-installed format. These documents can be drawn up to adapt to the needs of both parties, and are often signed for longer periods of time. Registration and notation are rarely avoided for such documents, as the consequences may Long-term rentals - Signed mainly for housing needs, long-term rentals include a large lump sum paid upfront rather than monthly rent payments. Since it is a large sum of money, they are registered and notary property. Important provisions to include in your lease agreement omitting certain vital provisions in the lease agreement leads to unpleasant legal battles if there are disagreements between the tenant and the landlord. Even if both sides know each other, it is ideal for making a comprehensive agreement to cover their backs. Here are some of the provisions that should never be omitted-rent, maintenance fees and collateral - the values of them must be clearly outlined in the contract to allow both parties to back off on their word. Pets - Whether animals are allowed indoors, it is necessary to discuss and agree in advance. Penalty for delayed payments - Landlords are free to place a fine for delaying rent payments. Details of the impact of late payments should be clearly stated in the dea. Cleaning and painting - If the landlord cleans and paints the house just before the Tenant moves, the fee will be deducted from the Tenant. Thus, the acts should clearly state that the fee for painting and cleaning will be cut from the collateral. Lock-in Period - This refers to the minimum duration during which the case cannot be dismissed by both parties. Consequences of delay - If the tenant continues to occupy the property even after the end of the contract, the landlord can decide the fine for it. Such punishment should be detailed in the death. Food Habits - The landlord should mention his own rules about food habits that may be practiced in his property. Things to keep in mind when renting If disagreements occur in the future, the lease agreement will be the focal point of the legal battle. However, there are some other factors that when overlooked can cause big trouble. Here are some things you should keep in mind - The authenticity of the owner - Sometimes, caretakers or tenants themselves can claim the owner and try to sublet the place. Make sure the guy claiming that the owner actually has the paperwork to prove it. Receipts for payments - Collecting receipts for every payment you make. Whether it's a token advance or a monthly rent, everything requires receipt. Painting and Maintenance - It is a general tendency to deduct painting fees from the collateral amount when the tenant vacates the property. However, if the house has not been painted while the tenant moves it, the landlord is not entitled to deduct the painting fee from the deposit. Registration - If your act is not registered it can only as collateral evidence if there is a dispute. Bail - Bail - is a certain amount of money collected in advance from the tenant to avoid avoiding landlord for non-payment of rent or damage to property. The amount is usually several months worth of rent and is returned at the time the keys are returned to the landlord. Token Advance - The token advance refers to a small amount of money paid by the tenant to the landlord before signing the lease. The idea is to prevent the landlord from allowing other potential tenants from developing an interest in the property. Once the token advance is paid, the transaction is considered final. If one of the parties decides to withdraw, it is obliged to compensate for the losses suffered by the other party.
