Everything is tactical, from guns to optics, to underwear. There are even tactical pen-written tools that double as weapons. Chalk it up to modern marketing: If it's not tactical, you won't survive! Well, maybe... Events in the tactical arena can be stunning and complex. To a certain extent, I have succumbed to some complex transmission solutions. But let's face it, the invasion of the house of a dozen bad guys remains relatively rare. It is also true that many families have members who are not victims of gunfire and have little or no formal training. They don't need and don't know how to use a sophisticated semi-automatic shotgun equipped with ghost ring sights, lights, lasers and door breaking tubes. These people are better off with a simple, short-barreled side-by-side shotgun like Stoeger Trainer Gun. At 6 1/2 pounds with a pair of 20-inch barrels, Stoeger Trainer Gun is a simple, effective tool for home defense. The barrels are short enough for quick processing and its basic break-even design allows you to use it to almost anyone. Double muzzles are an imposing statement for anyone can be a home invader. Available with 3-inch cameras in 12 and 20 gauges, as well as .410 bore, any unfortunate soul that chooses to challenge the owner of this shotgun will pay a hefty price tag. Coach Gun has a standard boxlock action-reliable, reliable and simple. During my evaluation period I used my coach gun extensively in training exercises and cowboy action matches to put about 400 rounds through it without a single drop of fire. Double triggers are standard, providing an instant selection of barrels between their IC and modified fixed throttles, although one trigger model is also available. My test gun was disguised in an A-class European walnut with a gun clutch and a beaver tail before the end, however a synthetic stock is available to those who use their scattergun in a hostile environment. The butt is limited to a solid plastic plate. The brass ball in front serves as a directional aid. The 12 gauge, lightweight double can be a handful, especially for small-statured shooters with little experience. Even shooting trap loads, a slick plastic buttplate will slide around a bit when I'm shot. If your family includes diminutive shooters, consider getting a trainer gun in 20 gauges and setting the recoil pad to it. You will need to make another modification in Coach Gun: make security where it's not automatic. It's an inconvenient feature on the gun game, but the self-defense shotgun is unacceptably dangerous, similar to the manual security deal after performing an emergency magazine magazine On the gun. Coach guns get their name from using guards on stagecoaches in the second half of the 19th century. They served the need at the time for an effective hand that was quick handling and easy to load out of the bumpy, rolling coach. The same characteristics make it an excellent choice as a home shotgun defense in the 21st century. Stoeger Coach Gun may not have mule ears and the atmosphere of old Wells Fargo shotguns, but it's much faster to manipulate and handle something critical to home gun shot defense.
