This project appeared when I came across an article about Gizmodo about a guitar hanger. I liked the idea, and since I couldn't find any retail in my area, I decided to make my own. For the parts, I just kind of came across them while shopping. I found a pack of five wooden Slack hangers for $3.99 at Marshall's and a tool hanger in the equipment supply garden for $0.89 each. Your costs can vary depending on where you find the parts. I only tested this with a rock band and Guitar Hero. Collect the following tools and materials for the project: Tools: 1 x 1/8 Drill Drill 1 x Dremel Rotary Tool or Electric Drill 1 x Hand Towel 1 x Vice Materials 1 x Hang Tool 1 x Wooden Slack Hanger 1-2 x Rock Band or Guitar Hero Guitars, which take precious space in your living room Take The Wooden Slack Hanger and wrap one end. This is to protect the wood while it is in vice. Place side of a wooden slack hanger covered with a hand towel in the blemish. Make sure to surface the area that you are going to drill into the faces up. Evaluate the drilling point by finding the middle where the metal hanger is inserted and at the end of the wooden Slack hanger and tag it. Don't try to make a big hole with a drill. Just drill the hole to give you less resistance when screwing into the tool hanger. Note: You should not try to drill near the center of the wooden Slack hanger, because the headgear (top of the guitar) will hit your rod cabinet. The wooden slack hanger uses two pieces of wood to clamp onto the pants. Use a drill to make a hole through the first piece of wood and halfway through the second. Use your best judgments on how far to drill. Also, when drilling, stop often because smoke/fumes have started to come from the hole and you can start a fire. Even if, you may have to stop often, this project will not take long, so be patient. Beat or erase any soot or foreign split wood as soon as the hole has been drilled. Repeat steps 2 - 5, but on the other side of the hanger and on the opposite end. Basically, turn the hanger 180 degrees. Slowly screw in the tool hanger, but don't screw all the way. The reason for going is slow so you can hear the piece of wood. If the wood starts shards, try getting the tool hanger to face the right way, either finishing the rotation or spinning until the last position it faces properly and stop there. The reason not screwing in every way is that the tool hanger I had more than pieces of wood, so if you are in a similar You will have to cover the part of the screw that sticks out at the other end. Also make sure that two pieces of wood are stored together by screwing it in, while screwing it in. I tested mine using only one rock band guitar (instead of 2) and the guitar hanger was still working. Surprisingly, mine doesn't tilt that much. With a real guitar (not a video guitar game), the results can vary. Suggestions for improvement: 1. Use the gum on the end of the tool hanger if you think your guitar will fall to the ground or you live in an earthquake territory. 2. Spray paint black and put a rock band or Guitar Hero sticker on it. Children's picture books provide hours of fun looking at stories. It is a pity to put these books in a closed position: the book world is cut off almost completely. The book kiosk solves this problem: it allows you to place a book with open pages, allowing you to see its contents. This instructable documents a special type of bookstand: one that is to be hung on the wall and thus upgrades the picture book into painting. A book hanger won't hurt a book. This wooden book hanger is not only suitable for picture books, but can also be useful for displaying a cookbook in the kitchen. The design features of this moving threefold bookstand: 1. The height of the design is adjustable, thus allowing different book sizes to be shown, and 2. The design depth is really flat and innovative but a simple method is used for sliding design, and 3. Only a few wooden planks are needed to build your own entire bookstand. Wooden paint stirrers are great for this. The design in this instructable applies to a relatively thin picture book, which makes the entire design easy and flat. Alternative sizes can make the hanger suitable for other book sizes. Pictures with pages made of cardboard are best suited for display in the book hanger: this ensures that the pages remain upright. Paper pages are offered in step 5 of this briefing (see paragraphs 4a to 4c). Wooden book hanger is available from openproducts online store (either as a kit or as a collected product), see www.instructables.com/member/openproducts. Two picture books were used in this instructable to demonstrate its functionality: The top images show a picture of a book called the Yellow Balloon by Charlotte Dematons, published by Dutch publisher Lemniscaat. The images displayed slightly below show a picture of a book called The Story of root children of Sybill von Olfers, published by Dutch publisher Christofor. The cookbook displayed in this instructable is a release from One, a Dutch supplier (www.odin.nl). For all three books permission was granted to show the photos in this instructable. Read more about both books (ISBN) is mentioned in step 6 of this briefing. In step 10 some words are spent explaining why the book hanger is innovative. Hi, I'm Monica and my friend Megshri from the white corner. Today we will show how to make a wall hanger in colored papers. Step: 1 Materials: Colored Paper Scissors Cardboard Sheet Glue Step: 2 Take a sheet of cardboard board and its in a circle. And glue the colored paper to it. Take yellow about paper colors and roll like sticks. And stick it on the back of the cardboard sheet. Step: 3 Take 2 colored paper and cut it in the shape of a heart. In small sizes, one and one is a large size. And stick a little heart on top of a big heart in a glue stick. And stick your hearts on a colored paper stick. And take another colored paper and cut out the shape of the heart and stick it on down the other hearts on a paper stick. Step: 4 Take colored paper of different colors. And draw a circle on it. And cut a circle and roll it like a flower. And stick a flower on a cardboard sheet. Now tie the thread on top of the cardboard and hang on the wall. Now the wall hanger is ready. Last updated October 14, 2020 What is success for you? How to be successful in life? For some, when they think of success, they imagine wealth; Others want power; some just want to have a positive impact on the world. All of this is quite real, really success is a concept that means different things to different people. Although no matter what success is for you, it almost certainly won't be something that will come easy. There are countless guides and books to be successful, however, as success is personal and unique to each person. The advice contained in these books often may not be relevant. Therefore, following the advice of one person can often be useless. With this in mind, given the advice of so many people, people whose ideas of success differed from each other, and it is possible that you can be a good alternative. Below is a list of the 13 best tips from some of the most successful people who have ever lived. If you want to learn how to be successful, these tips are important. 1. Think Big From Michelangelo Buonarroti, the Great Renaissance Artist: The great danger for most of us is not setting our goal too high and not being lived up to; but in setting our goal too low and reaching our mark. There are several artists as influential as Michelangelo. Today, centuries after his death, his work is still inspiring and connected with people. His work is world famous, just think of his statue of David, or Mural in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican. Being a successful artist has always been extremely difficult, imagine if he decided to from these ambitions in favor of something easier? Often people often decide to put their dreams aside for something more realistic. Give up your own for something simpler. This quote teaches us the dangers of such a view. Instead, be ambitious. 2 Find what you love to do and do it from Oprah Winfrey, Media Mogul: You know you're on your way to success if you do your job and not get paid for it. It's a good quote to remember and think about when you're at work. Imagine being as successful as possible in your current job. Ultimately, you will probably find yourself working very hard and it will take most of your time. If it's a job you hate, then being successful in doing it can only mean filling your life with something you hate doing. What's the point? Instead, why not focus on doing what you love? When you find something you love, you get the motivation to keep you moving. Success in this means fulfilling your dream. Don't know what your passion is yet? You should find out about this Motivation engine first. Even if you're not successful, you've still filled your time with something you love to do. Many successful musicians spent years of their lives making unpaid performances, the only reason they kept playing was because they loved performing. 3. Learn how to balance life From Phil Knight, CEO of Nike Inc.: There is an immutable conflict at work in life and in business, a constant struggle between peace and chaos. Neither of them can be mastered, but both can be influenced. As you go about that is the key to success. Too often people think that in order to be successful, they must make their lives a success. If a person thinks that his work will lead them to success, then they can spend countless hours a day and work hard in the evening. However, this is due to rest, your health and a pleasant life. Ultimately they can burn out and stop being successful at their job anyway. If success comes from having a strong social life and a good group of friends, their work may suffer; this means that they may lose their job and then be unable to afford to go out with friends. So success, as Phil Knight says above, helps balance. Think of it as a balance between rest and work, or work and play. To achieve this balance, this ultimate guide to prioritizing your work and life can help you. Don't be afraid of failure SO Henry Ford, founder of Ford Motors: Failure is just an opportunity to start over, this time more reasonable. There is a story, it is unconfirmed whether it actually happened, but the message inside is nonetheless true: Thomas Edison's reinvention of the light bulb was the result of several hundred failed attempts. In the interview he was asked: How do you feel after all your bad His response was great: I didn't let you down, I learned hundreds of ways not to reinvent the light bulb He saw every failure as a lesson. From this lesson, he learned that work, and can also work instead. Every failed attempt, every failure were key steps on his path to success. It's easy to feel that you have to give up after failure. But perhaps this failure is a lesson. Pay attention to your failures, study them. Maybe then you'll learn how to succeed. If you find it hard to deal with your fear of failure, here's a guide for you: Why you have the fear of failure (and how to defeat it step by step) 5 Have an unwavering resolution to succeed From Colonel Sanders, founder of KFC: I made the decision, what I was going to compose something if I could. And neither the clock, nor the amount of work, nor the amount of money would not prevent me from giving the best that was in me. And I've been doing it ever since, and I've been winning it. I know. This is largely due to the above quote about learning from your failures. This is the easiest thing in the world to give up failure. The only way to click on this is if you have a true burning desire to succeed so as not to be moved or dissuaded from your goals. If you are not really dedicated to success, every failure will hurt more, each set back will slow you down. Success is difficult; without an unwavering desire to succeed, this difficulty may seem insurmountable. With desire it is just an obstacle to pass 6. Being human action From Leonardo da Vinci, Renaissance Genius: It has long come to my attention that people reaching rarely leaned back on the back of the day and let things happen to them. They went out and happened to things. Although it was said hundreds of years ago, it works just as today as it ever was. This applies literally to any successful person. Think about it, imagine someone like William Shakespeare: When we think of the time when he lived, we think of time in a way shaped by it. Or think of the present, Bill Gates or Steve Jobs. Our current way of life would have been simply incomparably different if they hadn't done what they did. You're probably reading this article on the device of the company they either founded or the company under their influence. All these numbers were pre-emptive, they saw ways to do things differently and did it. If they allowed the world to shape them, they would simply take a back seat. Instead, they shaped the world. Apply this to you? Don't be afraid to go beyond the norm. If you can come up with a better way to do something, do it that way. If you fail, try again. Cultivating a positive relationship From Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th president of America: The most important ingredient in the formula for success is the ability to get along with people. The best leaders and some of the most influential people (and Theodore Roosevelt is one of the best leaders and of the most influential people who lived) lived) not those who caused unrest, who fought with people or ignored people; but there were people who were friendly to others. People liked them. They wanted them to be okay. This is the key to good leadership. That makes sense. If someone loves you, they want to help you; if you give them an offer, they will gladly follow through with it. But if someone doesn't like you, they can either refuse to help or actively paste on your way. What's more, it's always a good idea to develop a good relationship. You can never tell who will be someone who can help you in a big way, or even be a good and supportive friend. So help people and they can help you; and be good to the people, and they are my being kind to you. 8 Don't be afraid to introduce new ideas From Mark Twain, the famous author: The Man with the New Idea is an eccentric until the idea succeeds. Unfortunately, those with the boldest ideas are often ignored. Most of us learn from an early age to think and do things similar to everyone else. It can be great to fill an existing role. But to really do things differently (and all successful people did things differently), you have to think differently. If you have a new idea, don't throw it away because it's new and different; instead, celebrate it. Your strange new idea may one day be what will lead you to success 9. Believe in your ability to succeed From Walter Disney, founder of the Walt Disney Company: If you can dream about it, you can do it. Success should be something you can imagine achieving. It is possible that you meet those who doubt you and your ability to succeed. You don't have to become one of these people because the moment you stop believing and dreaming is the moment those dreams fall away. Keep dreaming! 10. Always maintain a positive mental attitude From Thomas Jefferson, the 3rd President of America: Nothing can stop a person with the right mental attitude from achieving his goal; nothing on earth can help a person with the wrong mental attitude. As the above quote says, you have to believe in your ability to succeed. It's the only way to cultivate the right mindset. Replace negative thoughts with positive ones. You have to approach the problems, not as obstacles, stopping you, but simply tasks that need to be completed for you to keep going. If you stay positive and think like this, failures won't affect you so much, people's doubts won't affect you, and even the biggest obstacles will seem like minor problems. However, with the wrong thinking doubts, you will be much easier to stop. 11. Don't let despondency stop you from pushing on From Abraham Lincoln, America's 16th President: Let No Feeling hunt for you, and in the end you are sure to succeed. It is a deplorable fact of human nature -- all of us in some way, doubt doubts it can be done much worse if others doubt us too. When surrounded by doubt, failure can actually seem like a good idea. Don't look at the doubts. If you are discouraged, ignore it. Watch this video and find out what to do, even if others don't believe you'll succeed: If that frustration moves in your mind and you start to doubt yourself. It's important to ignore this too. This is how self doubt keeps you stuck and how to overcome it. 12 Get ready to work hard From J.C. Penney, founder of J.C. Penney Inc.: If you're not willing to douse yourself into your work beyond the capabilities of the average person, you just don't cut for positions at the top. You may have heard a quote that success is 1% inspiration, 99% sweat, or you may have heard of a 10,000-hour idea. Whichever way you frame it, they say one thing: True success comes from work. You will never become successful if you do not work towards your goal in life and continue to work towards it. Check out this article and you'll understand why hard work beats Talent. Be brave enough to follow your intuition From Steve Jobs, co-founder of Apple Inc.: Use courage to follow your heart and intuition. They somehow already know what you really want to become. Everything else is secondary. In ancient Greece there was a group of oracles that lived in Delphi. Anyone who needed advice or to know their future visited them, from the poorest in society to the kings. Above the doors of the temple were words of knowing yourself. If you firmly believe and want something, chances are that you already have an idea how to get there. If not, you can naturally know that things will help you and what things will slow you down. It's like how your body can detect danger even when things seem safe. Ultimately, then, you have to trust your instincts. Final thoughts What you may have noticed that many of the above lessons are similar - most of them about developing the right state of mind. This makes it clear that the key to success, whatever you want, is how you approach it mentally. Also, no matter what stage of life you are currently in, you can still make a difference and succeed.
