These free apps have seriously saved ours recently, never forgetting to take pills to purchase the right way without even standing on the line. December 18, 2012 iTunes.com We are not here to join the iPhone/Android debate. The good thing about both is that they can make our daily girl problems that much easier. These free apps have seriously saved ours recently. From never forgetting to take pills to buying the right way without even standing on the line, here are the best apps for women. 1 of 7 SnapChat We don't necessarily promote sexting (although Salma Hayek once admitted that she is a fan of it!), but this app is the perfect tool for sending naughty pics to your guy (not showing his face, of course) or even silly face pic for your girlfriends because it puts a time limit on how long a pic can be seen. Set any length of time you want and the photo will be automatically removed from the recipients' phone. Avoid ScarJo-esque humiliation-genius! Price: Free 2 of 7 Period Tracker Because it's good to know when your friend comes to visit and track how regularly it is, for health reasons. Simply click when your period starts and it registers dates and calculates the average duration of cycles over the last three months, predicting the start date of the next period. Now you are ready to avoid any embarrassing accidents. Price: Free 3 of 7 Shop Savvy Ever buy yourself the best pair of shoes ever for a pretty penny and find out your prima got the same exact for literally half? Bummer. This app allows you to scan any barcode and it instantly compares prices with stores in your area. Price: Free 4 of 7 Stylish Girl So you have this amazing pair of sequined pants (agram, we hope so!), but don't top to go with it. When you get a shop you want these shiny rooms with you to pair it perfectly, but you don't want to carry them to the mall with you. This app is the coolest thing we've seen yet: it lets you upload fashion photos to your closet and pair them with clothes, shoes and accessories from a bunch of different online stores to find the perfect outfit. yes, and there's a version for your BF too, called Cool Guy. Price: Free 5 of 7 myPill Forgetting to take pills can lead to some great surprises! This app sets an automatic alarm for a tablet, patch, or ring, and sends a reminder that your period is on the way. It also reminds you when it's time to buy a new package. Price: Free 6 of 7 For all DIY nail scene queens, this app is new BFF. Change the skin tone of your hands on the screen and see how different colors match you. Now the pharmacy clerk won't bz about you trying on nail polishes! Price: Free 7 of 7 Worst Beauty Error is Hair Color-Gone wrong scenario. Script. Color Booth allows you to upload a picture of yourself and try on different hair colors to see which colors look better on you, from solid colors to glare and stripes. Price: Free Next Hilariously Bad Christmas Gifts Advertising - Continue reading below This content is created and supported by a third party, and imported to this page to help users provide their email addresses. You may be able to find more information about this and similar content on piano.io Over the past decade or so, phone calls have become extinct as our basic form of communication with most people with text messages is a substitute. And if you're going to use text messages as much as you do, you might as well use the best apps to do so. Let's talk about them. Best for most people: Android Messages Android Messages vision Google for SMS applications on Android, and the stock version on Nexus and Pixel devices. The good news is that it's available in the Play Store, so it works on any phone and it's totally free. What makes this app such a good choice is its clean, minimal interface - it just works really well. It's not filled to the brim with superfluous features, it just does what it does. Indeed, this is what most of us have come to expect from Google apps. Like all good SMS apps, it supports MMS (multimedia messages), but it also has a few other tricks up its sleeve. This allows users to attach the following messages to their messages: Photos and GIFs Of Stickers Voice Recordings Data You can also set up conversations by assigning certain colors to contacts, but it will also do it for you automatically if you don't want to be bothered by the setting up of each contact. After a while, you start to associate each contact with their color, so you can take a look at your phone and know exactly who the text is just by color. It's a simple feature that just makes sense. In short, if you're looking for simple text messaging apps that just work, this one is for you. Best for convenience: Facebook Messenger is almost all of us on Facebook, and if you're anything like me, you use Facebook Messenger almost as much as SMS to talk to friends and family. But here's the thing: you can actually do both things directly from the same interface, since Facebook Messenger supports SMS. It even has what I consider the best feature of the app: Chat Heads for text messages. So you can combine all your messages in this one place. I'm digging it. If you're already a facebook messenger user, you can easily include SMS in the app to give it to First, open the app and click on the profile picture in the top right corner. In this menu, scroll down and find a text message. Click on this and then click on the SMS slider in Messenger. A pop-up may ask if you want to use Messenger as a default customer- just click Yes. All New options will be available after that, so feel free to customize it to your liking. Otherwise, you're ready to start using SMS in Messenger. It's also worth noting that aside from the usual Messenger features (such as Chat Heads), Messenger also does this cool thing where it groups together business SMS-any kind of texts that you get from businesses with promotions etc. I think it's pretty cool. Also, if you just want to see SMS and keep your Facebook messages from your feed, just click the SMS button at the top next to the profile picture. Bam. Oh, and it's free. It's hard to beat that price. Best for Power Users: Textra If you're looking for all the bells and whistles from you SMS client, then look no further than Textra. This thing is chock full of killer features, but it still somehow manages not to feel bloated. But actually, I think that's what makes Textra so great: at first glance, it might be as simple as you want it to be, but if you feel like digging in, you can really customize it to do a lot more. Out of the box, it has a clean, dark interface. But if you're not that it has supportive themes like, dark, black, and even smart mode that will light up during the day and switch to night mode at certain times. You can also fully customize the color palette used, as well as the chat bubble and color icon. So if you're into aesthetics, you can pretty much get Textra to look the way you want. But there's a lot more to be honest, more than you would feel like reading if I tried to cram it all into this post. However, here's a quick list of some of my favorite things about Textra: You can rename group texts. You can specify the limit of sending mms messages, and Textra will shrink accordingly. Sent sounds are optional. It supports blacklists of numbers. Fast answers, notifications, and everything else related to notifications is customizable. It has scheduled messages. ... and really, this is just the beginning. Like I said, if you're a power user, this is the app you want. There's only one drawback: the free version has ads that appear as the first entry on your SMS list. It's really annoying. But there's $2.99 in app purchases that removes ads that are easily worth the price if you find that you're digging this app as I dig this app. Now, armed with this new knowledge, go ahead and text. Downloading and storing music on your phone or computer can be saved in the past. Today you can stream almost any music you Here are our best choices for free music streaming apps on Android and iPhone. Spotify Spotify is one of the most extensive music streaming services in the world with more than 30 million tracks in its library and over 83 million paid users. You can listen to music with ad support for shuffling (which is similar to using a radio). Finding and listening to tracks is also possible, but limited in a free tier. You can pay $9.99 a month ($14.99 for a family plan) and keep music offline, create custom playlists, and get a few more features. Check out Spotify's Android and iPhone apps. Pandora Pandora is another internet radio style app (just like most apps on our list). Enter the artist's name, genre, or song and Pandora will create a station just for you. The more music you listen to and appreciate, the more Pandora understands your tastes and recommends music based on them. It's a great way to discover new music. Although Pandora is free, you will have to create an account to listen to music. The free plan is also supported by advertising and allows you to skip a limited number of songs per day. The Pandora Plus plan ($4.99 per month) allows you to have four standalone stations, unlimited passes and replays, high-quality sound and no advertising. The premium plan ($9.99 per month) gives you access to on-demand music and playlist creation in addition to all Features of the Plus plan. Check out Pandora on Android and iOS. iHeart Radio We discussed iHeart Radio in our part on the best websites for streaming music, where we mentioned that iHeart Radio is part of the iHeartMedia group and they operate over 850 channels across the US. With its mobile apps, you can listen to live radio, news, podcasts and even create your own radio station based on your music preferences. You don't need to create an account to listen to music, and there are no audio ads that interrupt your music. But, you can only miss a limited number of songs per day. iHeart Radio is available for iOS, Android and a surprisingly large number of other devices. Google's latest YouTube Music changes to YouTube have turned their premium services into different levels. YouTube Red has been replaced by YouTube Premium and YouTube Music, the latter designed only for music. If you want to know more about the changes, you can read all the juicy details here. If nothing else, YouTube Music feels just like Spotify. You can search for songs, listen to playlists and so on. They also have a large selection of music from independent artists. You'll also get the power of Google's enhanced search; You can search for lyrics or even describe a song to find it on YouTube Music. YouTube Music is free to use and is supported by advertising. Google also offers a YouTube Music Premium for $9.99, which gets you background listening, offline access, and some other features. If you like exclusive YouTube content, then you can choose YouTube Premium instead of $11.99, as it will to subscribe to YouTube Music as well. Check out the YouTube Music app for Android and iOS. SoundCloud SoundCloud offers a great way to enjoy and discover new music. You can find some of your music is there, but that's not the Focus of SoundCloud. SoundCloud allows independent artists to download and host their music. The first time you use SoundCloud, you can see a lot of random music. But, the more you use it, the more it will learn and recommend music based on what you already love. SoundCloud has millions of tracks that you can listen to, but the lack of basic music can be a dealbreaker for some. If you prefer to listen to mostly famous artists, then you can give SoundCloud a pass, but we still recommend you give it a shot. Check out iOS and Android apps from SoundCloud. Tune In If you like to listen to the radio on your smartphone, you will like the tuneln mobile app. With it you can listen to radio, sports updates, podcasts and news, all on the go. In all, there are about 120,000 radio stations available on Tuneln. For music, you are not limited to just what is playing on the radio. Instead, you can search for performers or songs to bring a list of all the radio stations that play your choice. Listening to music or radio on Tuneln is free and supported by advertising. If you hate advertising, you can buy Tuneln Premium for $9.99 a month, which gets rid of advertising and lets you listen to live NFL, MLB and NHL games. Check out Tuneln on Android and iOS. Slacker Radio Slacker Radio Internet Radio is a service that allows you to listen to online radio in a variety of genres. You can fine-tune the station you're listening to to hear more music that you like, or let Slacker Radio help you in discovering the music. The free version of Slack Radio is supported by advertising, which includes both photo ads and audio ads. The number of free-plan passes is also limited. If you switch to the Plus-plan ($3.99 per month), you get rid of advertising, get better sound quality, and unlimited passes. Slacker Radio also has a premium plan for $9.99 per month that offers offline music and on-demand music on top of all Plus Plan features. Slacker Radio is available for iOS and Android.
