The Golden Saint Ayolos shot saved Saori, but was soon killed and gave Saori, the Bronze Saints go to the sanctuary to defeat the Pope, but upon arrival Saori is badly wounded by a golden arrow from the Silver Saint. To do this, they need to go through 12 temples, each of which is guarded by one Golden Saint (the most powerful Saint of Athena). After several battles, Saya enters the Temple of the Pope and learns that he is the Golden Holy Twins Saga, who in his madness killed the real Pope to gain more power. With the help of the cosmos of his friends, Seya can knock out Saga and use a shield from the statue of Athena to heal Saori. Soon after, Saga, having acquitted himself, committed suicide as a self-justification. In the second story arc, the Greek god is transformed into the body of Julian Solo, the heir to a wealthy and powerful family who follows his will to flood the Earth. Saori goes to his temple, where Julian offers her to reduce the flooding by absorbing water inside the Central Pillar of the Oceans. After Saori, Seyva, Hui, Hyun, Shun and Shirya go to the underwater temple of Poseidon and face its undersea, Marines. As Seyya, Hig and Shirya go to Julian, Ikki learns that the mastermind The war twin of Saga, Gemini Canon, who manipulates Poseidon's spirit wakes up inside Julian and manages to defeat his opponents. Rescued by the Saints from the Pillar, Saori seals Poseidon's soul in it. The third and final arc follows the god of the Underworld freed from his seal and revives the dead Golden Saints and Pope Aries Sion, and along with some of his 108 Ghosts sends them to the Sanctuary to kill Athena. The remaining Golden Saints, serving Athena, are able to conguer the enemies, but Saori commits suicide. This act is instead intended to send her directly to the Underworld to face Seydes face to face, and the Bronze Saints are battling the Ghosts of Aides, Shun is obsessed with Aides. Saori reaches Aida and banishes his soul from Shun's body. Ayd then takes Saori to Elysium, and the five Bronze Saints follow them. In the final fight against Aid and his two followers, Hypnos and Tanatos, the Saints acquire the strongest fabrics of God and use them to help Saori defeat Aida. However, Seyya also sacrifices himself after receiving one of Aydes' attacks, and the Saints return to Earth with their bodies. When Masami Kurumada was in the process of creating Saint Seya, he gave Seye the name Rin at first, as Kurumada was going to name his manga Ging no Rin (Rin Galactica). However, as Kurumada continued to develop his manga, he decided to change the name to Seiya, which was more relevant. He first wrote the name with Holy Arrow to link it to Seya's state as a saint, but later decided to use kanji, which meant Star Arrow to emphasize the constellation and mythological motif. Finally, he changed his manga was going to use constellations as a very important and constantly present theme, he wanted his hero to have a special pitch that would be like a stream of meteors. When Kurumada designed the likeness of Seyya, he was inspired by his character Ryuji Takane, the protagonist of his manga hit, which he created nine years before seiya. Most of the characters in Kurumada's works bear similarities to Ryuji, as Kurumada subscribes to the revered technique of s (stable cast of characters). The same process is done with almost all other characters in the series. Media Manga. Cover of Saint Seiya: Knights of the zodiac Volume 1, as published.
