Neil-labute-twitter.html,Nebe-polat-twitter.html,New-firefox-toolbars.html,Nic-ingledew-twitter.html,Niceone-app-store.html Faye Carey is a teenager who has devoted her time to giving new homes to abandoned dogs. It is intended to help find safe, loving homes for animals that have been abandoned and is trying to give each dog another chance to feel happy and loved again. How it started: When Faye Carey first started working at an animal shelter, he was a sweet puppy, and on her last day of work at the animal shelter, the puppy was still there. She felt sad that the puppy couldn't get a better home, so she decided to advertise it on TradeMe. He got a lot of interest and was soon adopted. Faye states in the article: 'He went to a great home in Auckland. ( . The idea to advertise with a Facebook page came when she tried to reinstall lying kiws and needed a free way to advertise. An article on Newshubu says: This idea came from a Facebook page she made when she tried to take off her. The site has received over 300 likes! Faye returned more than 60 dogs from the shelter. ( Faye Carey has made a big difference by helping to give the animals a better home and a chance to start over. The article states: 'Because Faye is there when the animal comes into shelter or controls the animals, the animal immediately returns to the new loving home. That's why Faye Carey is one of my exemplary . ( Faye was sad to sell this lovely puppy Bruno to get a good home. The article states Reality is that all suitable, loving homes will be loved as much as I do, Faye said. ( Instead of sending messages or going on Facebook, Faye spends all day devoted to rehoming animals. Faye Carey is a teenage activist who no longer wants pets to be abandoned because it's an important global issue. Born in Waiait and living there to this day, Faye volunteered at a local animal control branch. Faye is not like another teenager Because he doesn't use his phone all day or doesn't always text, he works all day. Faye is a great example of a teenage activist because she even volunteered for local animal control. The first day I left, we saw a puppy in a kilo, and the last day was still there! I was so sorry for him. So I advertised it on TradeMe (Great internet-auction website) and it got a lot like it! He went to a great home in Auckland, said Faye Idea came from a Facebook page that Faye made when she tried to auction a lying. This site has received over 300 likes! Faye has 70 dogs in animal control, and Faye still spends every Friday at a local animal shelter. You, too, can help in this worthy cause with something as simple as sending Facebook messages to get them involved in your local community. Another way you could help is sponsoring a pet adoption fair in your local pet store. Or you might even consider selling a bakery or some other means to help support pet adoption. It doesn't matter what you do while you're doing something! A Facebook page about adoption of pets, trying to advertise the taking of their dogs. This year, she even started her own pet adoption service called Animal Re-home Waikato, which finds dogs and cats new homes. Faye and I chatted about how she first got involved with animal rehoming, and how she continues to develop her organization to help even more animals in need of homes! Faye has always been a big fan of animals, and her family has always had dogs. He rides with her twin sister in a competitive race. Late last year, Faye's mother proposed to go to Waikato District Council Animal Control because of some work experience. 'At first I had no idea what I wanted to do.' Faye said. In the first week of work experience in animal control, the center picked up a small puppy, Bruno. He was in a kilo for a few days and I was so sorry. Faye said. I decided to advertise it on the Trade Me website and got a lot of interest! Trade Me is a New Zealand website designed to help people shop, sell and buy everything from clothing and tractors to livestock. Faye also found that this is a good place to advertise puppies who need homes. A week later, he went to a lovely family that has a big part in Auckland and still loves him to pieces, Faye said. Faye enjoyed her time in animal control and ended up learned a lot from staff about the needs of pets and other animals. I'm very grateful for the time they've spent with me and I enjoy being involved in the whistling community and enjoying the time I spend with dogs in a kilo, she said. Although Faye found it difficult to give Bruno away, she gained a valuable life experience from the event. 'The first puppy I had at home was very difficult to let go because I'm building a pretty strong relationship with the dog,' Faye said. He would do anything for me, and I would do the same for him. Bruno is now the face of Faye's organization, Animal Re-home Waikato. Alongside Faye's friend Emily, she appears in their Facebook profile image. Faye understands the importance of finding homes for these dogs. The reality is that everyone goes to suitable loving homes that they love as much as I do, Faye said. I constantly receive updates on our Facebook page from families of adopted dogs, which is really great and makes everything worthwhile. After working at the Animal Control Centre, Faye immediately knew she wanted to keep re-homing pound dogs. It felt so good to know that I had achieved something that made such a big difference, she said. Dogs for which Faye finds homes are usually dumped, handed over or picked up by an animal control team and never claimed by their owners. They come out of the pound, so it's up to me to train and look after them until they find their peri week homes, she said. These adopted be spayed and neutered, registered and micro-chipped, and treated for worms and fleas when they find a home. Since November 2012, Faye has re-homed 89 dogs and puppies, and about 20 kites. These numbers are on the rise all the time. The most rewarding part is seeing that every puppy or is adopted and goes into a new, loving home - an opportunity they may never have had otherwise, Faye said. In addition to re-homing animals, Faye also enjoys shopping, riding and sports. Despite her busy lifestyle, she manages to maintain volunteering for the animals. I can try to juggle school work, chores, my own animals at home and the work I do for the pound, but somehow I can do it, she said. I think it's easy for me to do my job because I'm so committed to helping these animals! Faye plans to continue the animal re-home of Waikato, and recently was admitted to the Unitec Institute of Technology at the Mt. Albert campus in Auckland, where she plans to get a degree in animal welfare and investigation. He then plans a career in animal control. I'm looking out for the animal control officers I work with because they have to deal with some pretty difficult situations that can be quite unpleasant, Faye said. It's not an easy job, but it's very rewarding when you see dogs going into nice homes. She said she was also grateful to her family, friends, the Waikato district, and much more for the great support and advice that enabled her animal-hoisting centre. I hope to expand Waikato Animal Re-Home into a charity in the next year so we can save more animals! said. Check out Animal Re-home Waikato on Facebook and show your support by clicking here!
