It was replaced by Kirkland Signature 304 Stainless Steel Strip Grill w/oven. It is a large and shiny gas grill built by Nexgrill for Costco and sold under the name Kirkland. At nearly $1,900 this grill has many features including two good quality cast brass side burners, a full grill set including an infrared burner and oven. However, as impressive as it looks the overall design is weak and I have had complaints about assembly problems and overall grill quality. My concern with this grill is the complexity of the guide and wiring of the oven Maker site Five 12,000 BTU Cast Stainless Steel Burners60,000 BTU main burner output1140 square inched total cooking area Two 12,000 BTU heavy side burners, Mounted on a cart, under the stainless steel lid10,000 BTU rear installed grill burner with a full kit2 cubic feet of gas powered oven Heavy stainless steel cooking grille Ceremonial briquette on a tray of stainless steel barrier120-volt electric ignition. Requires the grill to be connected to aMade electrical outlet in China For the Kirkland Costco brand this grill really looks good. The stainless steel is beautifully polished and the device is very large. There is plenty of cooking space, two side burners, a smoker box, a full grill with a rear installed infrared grill burner and even a lid. It's the same as the Kirkland Grand Classic. The oven was added to replace one of the cupboards. The problem with this grill, like many of this type, is that a lot of attention has been paid to appearance and features. For size, this grill should produce more heat than 60,000 BTUs from the five main burners. But the biggest problem is the same with many of The Kirkland Grills, the assembly is weak. I know a few people who are quite happy with these grills, but I've also got stories about this block coming back to build bugs that cause big problems. The design of the truck is not great and this diminishes heavily from the overall unit. At $1,900 you really have to get a better built grill. On the other hand, you get a full grill cover, so you have no excuse to let it sit in the elements, Costco has been very good about making returns and supporting this grill. Unfortunately, you don't have to rely on a refund policy to justify buying a grill. My main problem with this grill is the complexity of the oven unit. Wired with a series of gas and electrical (this device must be connected for the oven to work) connection and a complex set of warnings. Manufacturer's website
