The UPPAbaby G-LUXE was discontinued and replaced with a Minu light stroller. Founded in the U.S. in 2006, their mission is to make intuitively designed products that are sleek and stylish, featuring features that parents want, and the G-Luxe certainly fits the brief. Celebrity fans of their UPPAbaby Cruz and Vista buggies include the likes of Emily Blunt, Adele and Lily Allen, while Claire Danes and Natalie Portman own one of their strollers. What's in the box? The box contains a stroller as well as a removable SPF 50'hood and sunshade, which easily presses on and a separate rain cover. The shopping basket is fixed in position and it's a good size - perfect for all those bits and bobs when out of stores. The canopy doesn't look great, but it does have a hidden sun visor that goes all the way down, so perfect on those sunny days when you don't want to be indoors. The front wheels should be popped in (very simple) and then it can be opened and ready to go in five minutes flat. The instructions come with great diagrams, so there was no need to call my husband for help! It also comes with a removable sub-sill that also clips and fits a coffee cup or water bottle. Is it easy, how do you expect it? Yes. At 6.1kg it is one of the lightest strollers on the market and can be easily lifted on one side. It's not as easy as the UPPAbaby G-Lite, but pays off in that it has great stability. It also has a carry strap, so you can wear it over your shoulder - a useful addition when you leave and at the airport or going down the stairs, for example. This means you can put the stroller over your shoulder and have two hands loose to carry your baby. At my local train station, there is a staircase and a bridge over the platform so I loved this feature. It is also set comfortably at the back of our five-door golf course. How does the UPPAbaby G-Luxe push? Very easily, I tested the stroller around the local sidewalks, mounting curbs and through the muddy terrain, and it felt Strong. With high-performance wheels and all-wheel-drive suspension, my little one had a very smooth ride, and I was The front wheels are turning, but can be locked for added stability. I believe it is more suitable for urban parents, but can be used on different terrains. A break is one action one on the back. At 42 inches tall, the steering wheel is great for both short and tall parents to push the stroller - they are not adjustable, but can be held differently, depending on your height. How comfortable is the stroller? Very, the seat is soft and the fabric is slick and waterproof. It's also a removable and washing machine, which is perfect - it's attached to the Velcro, so after the spill, all you have to do is pull it out. The stroller has a single 3-seat seat, which is adjusted by the lever at the back of the seat. This is an improvement in the switching mechanism on older models, which are said to be inconvenient. However, it does not go completely flat, so it is not recommended for newborns, but the three positions offer more flexibility. The 5-point harness with the central release button is very safe, but I found it pretty tough at first. Another great feature is the adjustable footrest, it was perfect for my youngest daughter who could stretch while she slept. Is it easy to open and close? Yes, an umbrella stroller can sometimes be uncomfortable to open and close, but the G-Luxe is easy. You need both hands just activated by a two-finger trigger located on either side of the frame, but no leg action is required. It took a while to get to know myself, but once I did it was simple and fast. It stood up while folded (I think it's a unique selling point), but for me, it didn't look particularly steady and seemed to be better leaning against something or lying on the ground. In saying this, it has a comfortable lock to keep it in a closed position on the side. Is it good value? Priced at 194.99 pounds, it's to the more expensive end of the market with top pram brands like McLaren and Quinny. While the downside of this stroller is that it is not suitable from birth and there is no travel system option, I personally think strollers are most useful for toddlers once they have outgrown their strollers. So I think it's definitely worth the money and it's the kind of product that you will definitely use over and over again, especially if you are using it for more than one child. I was able to use it for my six-month-old and three-year-old. The stroller is suitable for children up to 55 pounds, which is the average weight of a four-year-old child. An additional financial benefit for the UPPAbaby G-Luxe is that it comes with a free two-year warranty by simply registering the product online within three months of purchase. Make sure you keep your evidence also to check the warranty. G-Luxe is currently sold at John Lewis and other retailers. MadeforMums Verdict: Smooth, sleek, and a sturdy light stroller that had a number of shiny features but was replaced by a light Minu stroller. Read more often... No, the baby may suffocate.
