Insurance can help protect business owners from a variety of losses, including property losses and losses arising from lawsuits or other liability actions. Business owners need both property and liability insurance to ensure they don't lose everything if disaster strikes. Property insurance is insurance coverage purchased by the company to cover the loss of objects and equipment as a result of events over which the owner of the enterprise had no control, such as fires or natural disasters. This policy covers buildings and facilities, computer equipment, equipment, supplies, equipment; they may include a provision for the loss of income earned in the event of loss. For example, suppose a tornado hit a small construction business, destroying offices and a supply shipyard. This business will not only suffer the loss of the building and equipment, but will also incur the loss of income it would have incurred in the time needed to rebuild. General liability insurance insures against damages related to lawsuits against business and business owners. For example, if a customer falls on a business premises, this coverage pays the associated costs, including legal fees and any rewards that may arise. Businesses need both property and liability insurance to provide a basic level of protection. Businesses may also need other coverage for specific business activities. Property insurance covers property owned by the business itself. The provision on loss of property in the general policy of liability covers the loss of property suffered by other persons in connection with the action directly related to the company's activities. The business owner's package includes both general liability and property insurance. By combining both policies through the same carrier, a business owner can usually take advantage of discounts and savings opportunities that would not be available if policies were purchased separately. In addition, by combining policies into one package, the owner can more easily recognize any gap in coverage that needs to be addressed by purchasing a separate policy type. Social Security phone fraud is the number one type of fraud reported to the Federal Trade Commission. Callers claim that you have a problem with your Social Security number or benefits and require immediate payment from you to avoid arrest or other lawsuits. Continue reading the acting inspector general of Social Security, Gail Stallworth Stone, warns Citizens about the current Office of the Inspector General (OIG) impersonation of the scheme. The OIG recently received reports from citizens of suspicious phone calls claiming to have come from responsibilities of the Inspector General. Continue reading online and otherwise, there is a lot of information out there and sometimes it is difficult to tell which sources are reliable. Millions of people rely on Security, scammers target the audience who are looking for programs and benefits information. A law that treats misleading Social Security and Medicare advertising prohibits people or non-government businesses from using words or emblems that mislead others. Their advertising may not lead people to view what they represent, in some way related to, or approved or approved by Social Security or the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (Medicare). People often mislead advertisers who use the terms Social Security or Medicare. Often these companies offer Social Security services for a fee, although the same services are available directly from Social Security free of charge. These services include receipt; Continue reading the acting inspector general of Social Security, Gail Stallworth Stone, alerts citizens about the ongoing Social Security Administration (SSA) impersonation schemes. The FSA and the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) have recently received several reports of suspicious phone calls alleging that they have come from the FSA. Continue reading the acting inspector general of Social Security, Gail Stallworth Stone, warns Citizens about the new Social Security Administration (SSA) staff impersonation scheme. The SSA and its Office of the Inspector General (OIG) recently warned Citizens about an OIG employee impersonation scheme and a scheme targeting former Kentucky disability attorney Eric Conn; the agencies are now receiving reports from citizens across the country about other phone calls from a person posing as an SSA employee. The caller tries to obtain personal information from the victims to then edit the victim's direct deposit, address and phone information with the SSA. Continue reading Gail Stallworth Stone, the acting inspector general of Social Security, warns Citizens about a phone scheme allegedly targeting former Kentucky disability attorney Eric C. Conn. The Social Security Administration (SSA) and its Office of the Inspector General (OIG) have received reports that Kentucky citizens who used Conn's law firm to assist in applying for Social Security disability benefits recently received suspicious calls from people claiming to be from the SSA. Continue reading Gail Stallworth Stone, acting inspector general of social services, urges citizens to remain vigilant of the nationwide phone impersonation scheme. Following the public's announcement in early March of suspicious calls from people posing as the Office of the Inspector General (OIG), the Social Security Administration (SSA) and the OIG received additional information about the phone scheme from citizens across the country. Continue reading This morning is a busy day at home and you will get a call from an unknown number. You answer only to find the find at the receiving end of a threatening message that your Social Security benefits will be terminated immediately unless you provide your personal information. It happens every day for thousands of Americans. And it doesn't ring the social security system. This time last year I was notified that a blood chip had been found in my urine that lead me on a path that I didn't want to go down but makes me grateful for every day!! This year all my lab work came back good. Losing weight brought all my results down. GFR went from 100 to 89, but I'm not complaining about that number for having only 1 kidney. Creatine was at 1.0. It's amazing what stats I'm looking at now. I still thank God that my general doctor did not pass the presence of microscopic blood as an infection and directed me. Next is another 6th month of scanning in early 2019 and hoping to finish the annual scan after that.
