The rest of our CV guide is very hands-on and practical. We're going to guide you through the best way to format your resume, so you're sure to get the best result from your efforts. These four tips below are super easy to follow and apply to pre-existing resumes. 1. Length If you are applying for an academic position, always go for a one-page resume. This provides a clean and organized layout that the recruiter can easily decipher. A structured and neatly formatted resume points to a structured and tidy person, which is always a plus for a potential employer. 2. Fonts Usually, you should always choose a serif font. This means that the font that has no serifs. Fonts with solder to them, and this could potentially fail up the applicant's tracking systems. So to be on the safe side, use fonts such as Arial or Calibri that don't have a serif pro tip: all the fonts in the Builder Jofibo resume are serifless. 3. Align Keep the body of your text appear clumsy and messy. It's also your chances of getting past the applicant tracking systems. 4. ATE friendliness All three tips above will increase your chances of going through the dreaded applicant tracking systems. But there are still things you can easily do: Keep Hold The CV format key pick If you only take one thing from this post, let it be so: choose
