Do you need to study vocabulary for the ACT, but don't know where to start? We have links to free ACT vocab listings from all over the internet. We've also found other vocab research resources - from video to apps and browser plugins - to help you explore the ACT-specific vocabulary. A few words of advice: Don't overdo Vocab Vocabulary on the ACT is far from the most important thing you can do to prepare. You won't be tested on obscure words or need to memorize definitions to be successful. Spending hours memorizing the difficult, secret words vocab won't help you on the ACT. This is because the ACT tests medium-complexity words in the context of sentences and focuses on multi-meaning words. For more information on this, read our article on act vocabulary - it's a must read before you start learning! In short, make sure you don't just memorize your vocabulary and assume that it will help you prepare for ACT English and ACT Readings. You should focus on being able to identify vocabulary in context and recognize words with multiple intentions. Many preparatory programs over-emphasize vocabulary memorization because it is easy to teach. However, learning vocabulary is important for the ACT (we recommend using the waterfall method to study), so we're including lists of words and resources here. Keep in mind that you should consider vocabulary as just one component of ACT Reading and English. Don't neglect to learn grammar rules or reading practices. It's important that your ACT study regimen is balanced. Don't spend so much time on one skill you neglect another. ACT Vocabulary Word Lists As we discussed above, the ACT is all about testing vocabulary in context rather than weird, obscure words. Beware of any super-long lists of words that claim to be for the ACT - they're probably just old lists of SAT words with a different name. Focus on learning medium-complexity words very well, so you know them in context, and less on learning as many words as possible. I recommend starting with our List of PrepScholar. We focus on words with multiple meanings that may appear on the ACT. Our 150 words ACT also includes some vocabulary to help you in the science section. If you are still struggling with vocabulary after learning our 150 words, you can also learn these 100 words from Scholastic. Technically, this is an ACT/SAT list, but it focuses on the medium-complexity words that appeared in the scholastic publication, so this will be useful for the ACT. Finally, you can learn 50 more scientific-specific vocabulary words to help with the science section. If you have these words under your belt, you To have the base you need to do well on ACT Reading and English. Remembering a bigger word will have a decrease in profits, as again, obscure words are not checked by the ACT. And more importantly, you should practice the possibility of defining words in context. ACT ACT Practice will be just as useful for learning that skill. Memorizing hundreds of vocab words will not. Flashcards, games and other resources Here are some additional free web resources that can be really useful for learning the ACT vocabulary, and specifically to study words in the context of great articles or passages. The first two would be great resources for any student. The last two are useful for students who are auditory students or learn best by example. The quiz is a flash card website that you can use to learn the vocabulary of words. If you make an account, you can use their website, but also mobile apps for iPhone and Android - which means you can learn when you find yourself with a free moment. You can search through thousands of existing flash card sets on the quiz. You can make your own sets using the lists above, or search the ACT dictionary to access the pre-made flash cards other users have made. Just be careful you don't pull up the supposed ACT Vocab map set that's actually just an old SAT dictionary. (Any lists longer than 250 words are too long.) You can also search for ACT Science to view more vocabulary science. I personally used this app all the time in college for my language classes and found its format very useful. I could make flash cards on the quiz much faster than writing them out manually. Also, I wanted to pull up the app when I found myself with free time (waiting in line somewhere, for example) and learn a few words. ProfessorWord is an app for your browser that pulls ACT vocabulary words from articles and pages and identifies them for you. This is really cool, because if you read articles online, especially in publications such as The Economist, Time, or The New Yorker, you come across tons of ACT vocabulary words. This app just passes and points to them, so you don't miss them! It's a great way to learn words in context, which is super useful for preparing for ACT Reading and English. Even if you only read one article a day, despite the highlighted words and testing your knowledge of them, you can improve your ability to define words in context. It's a great way to practice to act vocabulary as well as a fun way if you like reading articles and blogs. No, Mum, I'm not just reading Game of Thrones for fun, it's for the ACT! Instead of just giving you a dictionary definition, they also use a vocabulary of words in sentences, with animations to match to help you learn. Go to the Learning Room tab to vocabulary video. You can go through the SAT Common 300 list, as it has many words that intersect with the ACT vocabulary. You can also go to the Master list to look for the words you are having problems with. Vocab Sushi If You Are You Online quiz, Vocab Sushi is a fun site that lets you test your vocab knowledge with quizzes and teaches vocab words using them in sentences. This site is particularly useful for the ACT because it emphasizes meaning in context. Vocab Sushi draws an example of sentences from real newspapers and magazines, helping you see how words are actually used in the real world. It's a great way to learn vocabulary in the way the ACT tests it - through context. What's next? What else do you need besides vocab to do well in the ACT? Last updated October 14, 2020 What is success for you? How to be successful in life? For some, when they think of success, they imagine wealth; Others want power; some just want to have a positive impact on the world. All of this is quite real, really success is a concept that means different things to different people. Although no matter what success is for you, it almost certainly won't be something that will come easy. There are countless guides and books to be successful, however, as success is personal and unique to each person. The advice contained in these books often may not be relevant. Therefore, following the advice of one person can often be useless. With this in mind, given the advice of so many people, people whose ideas of success differed from each other, and it is possible that you can be a good alternative. Below is a list of the 13 best tips from some of the most successful people who have ever lived. If you want to learn how to be successful, these tips are important.1 Think BigFrom Michelangelo Buonarroti, the Great Renaissance Artist: The great danger for most of us is not setting our goal too high and not being lived up to; but in setting our goal too low and reaching our mark. There are several artists as influential as Michelangelo. Today, centuries after his death, his work is still inspiring and connected with people. His work is world famous, just think of his statue of David, or Mural in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican. Be successful it has always been extremely difficult, imagine if he decided to give up these ambitions in favor of something simpler? Often people often set aside your dreams aside for something more realistic. Give up your dream for something easier. This quote teaches us the dangers of such a view. Instead, be ambitious.2 Find what you love to do and do it from Oprah Winfrey, Media Mogul: You know you're on your way to success if you do your job and not get paid for it. It's a good quote to remember and think about when you're at work. Imagine being as successful as possible in your current job. Ultimately, you will probably find yourself working very hard and it will take most of your time. If it's a job you hate, then being successful in doing it can only mean filling your life with something you hate doing. What's the point? Instead, why not focus on doing what you love? When you find something you love, you get the motivation to keep you moving. Success in this means fulfilling your dream. Don't know what your passion is yet? You should find out about this Motivation engine first. Even if you're not successful, you've still filled your time with something you love to do. Many successful musicians spent years of their lives making unpaid performances, the only reason they kept playing was because they loved performing. 3. Learn how to balance life From Phil Knight, CEO of Nike Inc.: There is an immutable conflict at work in life and in business, a constant struggle between peace and chaos. Neither of them can be mastered, but both can be influenced. As you go about that is the key to success. Too often people think that in order to be successful, they must make their lives a success. If a person thinks that his work will lead them to success, then they can spend countless hours a day and work hard in the evening. However, this is due to rest, your health and a pleasant life. Ultimately they can burn out and stop being successful at their job anyway. If success comes from having a strong social life and a good group of friends, their work may suffer; this means that they may lose their job and then be unable to afford to go out with friends. So success, as Phil Knight says above, helps balance. Think of it as a balance between rest and work, or work and play. To achieve this balance, this ultimate guide to prioritizing your work and life can help you. Don't be afraid of failureSO Henry Ford, founder of Ford Motors: Failure is just an opportunity to start over, this time more reasonable. There is a story, it is unconfirmed whether it actually happened, but the message inside is nonetheless true: Thomas Edison's reinventing light bulb was the result of several failed attempts. In the interview he was asked: How do you feel after all your failed attempts? His answer was great: I didn't let down, I learned hundreds of ways not to invent saw every failure as a lesson. From this lesson he learned that he would not work, and could also work instead. Every failed attempt, every failure were key steps on his path to success. It's easy to feel that you have to give up after failure. But perhaps this failure is a lesson. Pay attention to your failures, study them. Maybe then you'll learn how to succeed. If you find it hard to deal with your fear of failure, here's a guide for you: Why you have the fear of failure (and how to defeat it step by step).5 Have an unwavering resolution to succeed From Colonel Sanders, founder of KFC: I made the decision, what I was going to compose something if I could. And neither the clock, nor the amount of work, nor the amount of money would not prevent me from giving the best that was in me. And I've been doing it ever since, and I've been winning it. I know. This is largely due to the above quote about learning from your failures. This is the easiest thing in the world to give up failure. The only way to click on this is if you have a true burning desire to succeed so as not to be moved or dissuaded from your goals. If you are not really dedicated to success, every failure will hurt more, each set back will slow you down. Success is difficult; without an unwavering desire to succeed, this difficulty may seem insurmountable. With desire it is just an obstacle to pass6. Being human action From Leonardo da Vinci, Renaissance Genius: It has long come to my attention that people reaching rarely leaned back on the back of the day and let things happen to them. They went out and happened to things. Although it was said hundreds of years ago, it works just as today as it ever was. This applies literally to any successful person. Think about it, imagine someone like William Shakespeare: When we think of the time when he lived, we think of time in a way shaped by it. Or think of the present, Bill Gates or Steve Jobs. Our current way of life would have been simply incomparably different if they hadn't done what they did. You're probably reading this article on the device of the company they either founded or the company under their influence. All these numbers were pre-emptive, they saw ways to do things differently and did it. If they allowed the world to shape them, they would simply take a back seat. Instead, they shaped the world. Apply this to you? Don't be afraid to go beyond the norm. If you can come up with a better way to do something, do it that way. If you fail, try again. Cultivating a positive relationship From Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th president of America: The most important ingredient in the formula for success is the ability to get along with people. Top leaders and some of the influential people (and Theodore Roosevelt Roosevelt of the best leaders and one of the most influential people who lived) were not the ones who caused unrest, who fought with people or ignored people; but there were people who were friendly to others. People liked them. They wanted them to be okay. This is the key to good leadership. That makes sense. If someone loves you, they want to help you; if you give them an offer, they will gladly follow through with it. But if someone doesn't like you, they can either refuse to help or actively paste on your way. What's more, it's always a good idea to develop a good relationship. You can never tell who will be someone who can help you in a big way, or even be a good and supportive friend. So help people and they can help you; and be good to the people, and they are my being kind to you.8 Don't be afraid to introduce new ideas From Mark Twain, the famous author: The Man with the New Idea is a eccentric until the idea succeeds. Unfortunately, those with the boldest ideas are often ignored. Most of us learn from an early age to think and do things similar to everyone else. It can be great to fill an existing role. But to really do things differently (and all successful people did things differently), you have to think differently. If you have a new idea, don't throw it away because it's new and different; instead, celebrate it. Your strange new idea may one day be what will lead you to success⁹. Believe in your ability to succeed From Walter Disney, founder of the Walt Disney Company: If you can dream about it, you can do it. Success should be something you can imagine achieving. It is possible that you meet those who doubt you and your ability to succeed. You don't have to become one of these people because the moment you stop believing and dreaming is the moment those dreams fall away. Keep dreaming! 10. Always maintain a positive mental attitude From Thomas Jefferson, the 3rd President of America: Nothing can stop a person with the right mental attitude from achieving his goal; nothing on earth can help a person with the wrong mental attitude. As the above quote says, you have to believe in your ability to succeed. It's the only way to cultivate the right mindset. Replace negative thoughts with positive ones. You have to approach the problems, not as obstacles, stopping you, but simply tasks that need to be completed for you to keep going. If you stay positive and think like this, failures won't affect you so much, people's doubts won't affect you, and even the biggest obstacles will seem like minor problems. However, with the wrong thinking doubts, you will be much easier to stop. 11. Don't let despondency stop you from pushing Abraham Lincoln, america's 16th president: Let there be no sense of frustration to prey on you, and in the end you are sure that it is a sad fact of human nature -- all of us in some way, to doubt ourselves. It can be done much worse if others doubt us too. When surrounded by doubt, failure can actually seem like a good idea. Don't look at the doubts. If you are discouraged, ignore it. Watch this video and find out what to do, even if others don't believe you'll succeed: If that frustration moves in your mind and you start to doubt yourself. It's important to ignore this too. This is how self doubt keeps you stuck and how to overcome it.¹² Get ready to work hardFrom J.C. Penney, founder of J.C. Penney Inc.: If you're not willing to douse yourself into your work beyond the capabilities of the average person, you just don't cut for positions at the top. You may have heard a quote that success is 1% inspiration, 99% sweat, or you may have heard of a 10,000-hour idea. Whichever way you frame it, they say one thing: True success comes from work. You will never become successful if you do not work towards your goal in life and continue to work towards it. Check out this article and you'll understand why hard work beats Talent. Be brave enough to follow your intuition From Steve Jobs, co-founder of Apple Inc.: Use courage to follow your heart and intuition. They somehow already know what you really want to become. Everything else is secondary. In ancient Greece there was a group of oracles that lived in Delphi. Anyone who needed advice or to know their future visited them, from the poorest in society to the kings. Above the doors of the temple were words of knowing yourself. If you firmly believe and want something, chances are that you already have an idea how to get there. If not, you can naturally know that things will help you and what things will slow you down. It's like how your body can detect danger even when things seem safe. Ultimately, then, you have to trust your instincts. Final thoughtsWhat you may have noticed that many of the above lessons are similar - most of them about developing the right state of mind. This makes it clear that the key to success, whatever you want, is how you approach it mentally. Also, no matter what stage of life you are currently in, you can still make a difference and succeed.
