Even if the main function of the messenger, the Messenger app comes with a lot of other features that include video calls, the ability to send images and videos with high compression speed, a significant collection of emojis and stickers, the ability to send recorded messages and more. Messenger is regularly updated, so new features are added all the time. It is also worth noting that some functions are limited to certain countries. For example, the ability to send money using an app is limited to the United States. Chat with Facebook Friends Import contacts with address phone book Send free messages to your friends Stress your friends for free on Wi-Fi Start chats with multiple users Send all kinds of multimedia files Use GPS phone, to tell people where you are English (United Kingdom) English (United States) Spanish (Latinoamerica) Demand for video conferencing tools has skyrocketed in recent months, and Facebook has played a relatively minor role in this space, despite owning two leading messaging apps. Taking steps to work that out, the social media giant introduced Messenger Numbers last month for a more casual video chat experience with smaller groups. After expanding the service to a global audience, Facebook is now rolling out its integration into WhatsApp, starting with the newest beta. One of our tipsters noticed a new 'Room' icon on the sharing menu inside the WhatsApp chat, replacing the Camera option. It's basically a shortcut to direct you to the Messenger app after showing you an introduction on first use. While in Messenger, you can move as usual to create a new room or join an existing one. You can also access this new action label from WhatsApp's Challenge tab. As WABetaInfo notes, Messenger Rooms integration only appears for a handful of users working with the latest beta version of WhatsApp, and this is also in a limited number of countries. In addition to our tipster in the US, twitter users have a feature in Ghana, Brazil, dominican Republic and Colombia. Although it is still unavailable to my colleague Rita and me in Lebanon and India, respectively. The feature is still gradually rolling out for more users in other regions. You can try your luck by downloading WhatsApp beta 2.20.163 from APK Mirror and give it a chance. During the initial announcement of Messenger Rooms, Facebook unveiled its plan for such integrations for WhatsApp and Instagram - the latter of which could also be on its way.
