Online multiplayer PvP is kind of a big deal these days. In the last couple of years in the genre there was a massive surge. There are a number of genres where an online fighter can take place. There are strategy games like Clash Royale, MOBAs like Onmyoji Arena, card games like Hearthstone, and auto-lovers (auto-chess) like Dota Underlords. Games give you the same peak regardless of your poison. This is you and another player duking it for supremacy in fast fights that often last less than five minutes. It's a diverse genre, but we think we've found the best online multiplayer PvP games for Android. We also recommend that you check out our wider list of multiplayer games here as well as for more ideas. The Fight StarsClash RoyaleDead by Daylight MobileDota UnderlordsGwentCheck from more online PvP games here: Brawl StarsPrice: Free playBrawl Stars is another Supercell game. You and a few other people duke it out against other opponents online. The game includes several modes of play, including one against one, two against two, and three against three play along with multiple types of game mechanics. You'll also get leaders, some extra heroes to collect and upgrade, and lots of new content as the game matures. It's not quite as strategically intense as Clash Royale, but the online multiplayer aspect is still pretty good. Clash RoyalePrice: Free to playClash Royale is one of the biggest online multiplayer pvP games right now. This is a tower attack game where two players collide to see who can take the other side. Players collect different characters, build decks with them and fight against the enemy. There are also various potions and spells to help swing the match. The game has been around for a while and some of its players are a bit burnt out. However, there is a healthy player base and lots of updates to bring new content. Dead daylight MobilePrice: Free to playDead by Daylight Mobile is an asymmetrical online multiplayer game. It pits four players against a solo player. A solo monster player hunts down a group of four men who also hunt a solo monster. It has elements of survival horror because the monster has some abilities that make killing it quite difficult. This is something a lot different from your typical online PvP game and the uniqueness makes it a great choice for this list. The game has some bugs here and there, but it's usually quite fun. The full version on the PC is even better. Dota UnderlordsPrice: Free to playDota Underlords is an option in Autochess Dota 2. Players collect characters, form a team and duel with other players. Every character you recruit creates an alliance with others that you have. You get the best teams by stacking up symbols that union with each other. The game also includes matchmaking ratings, leaders, viewer mode, and seasonal rotation, which sees some of the leave and other content returns. GwentPrice: Free to PlayGwent is a mobile version of The Witcher card game. It plays a lot like the version you play in the game. Players collect cards, build decks and duel with unique rules of the game. Developers are trying to make the skill issue little more than luck and there are several different ways to build decks and play. The controls may be a little better, but the content is actually very good, and it's a solid game, especially for Witcher lovers.Read more: HearthstonePrice: Free to playHearthstone is a grandfather card duel game on your mobile phone. It is still super popular despite its age and there is a metric ton of cards to collect. Players collect cards, build decks and duel with each other. All characters from the Warcraft universe. In addition, the game has a single player mission, supporting six languages, and you can play it on your PC as well as mobile with its cross-game feature. You don't get as much action as Clash Royale, but the elements of the strategy are definitely still there. Legends RuneterraPrice: Free to playLegenda Runeterra is a card duel game from Riot Games, creators of League of Legends. It works just like Hearthstone with a few big changes. Players not only build decks from an existing collection of cards, but also choose a champion to build a deck around. The game also includes social gaming features, decent mechanics, and lots of cards to collect. This one is relatively new, so it will build up even more over time. Onmyoji ArenaPrice: Free to playOnmyoji Arena, arguably the best MOBA available right now, MOBAs are relatively easy to understand. You and the team are up against an opponent's team. The winner is the one closest to capturing the other side. The game has five against five battles along with three against three (nine total players). The characters (Shikigames) are relatively well balanced, though some are certainly better than others. Normally we'd put something like Vainglory or Arena Valor in this place, but both of them have problems at the time of writing this article, so we would recommend something that was actually good. RWBY: Amity ArenaPrice: Free to playRWBY: Amity Arena and RWBY Deckbuilding Game are two deck duels from the RWBY Rooster universe. RWBY: Amity Arena has a bit more action while RWBY Deckbuilding Game has a little more strategy. Amity Arena lets you pick a hero, build a deck and fight other players online. RWBY Deckbuilding Game is mostly like Hearthstone, but with RWBY characters and a slightly slower style of play. You can go with any of them, but we like Amity Arena a little better. Teamfight TacticsPrice: Free PlayTeamfight Tactics is another online PvP game from Riot We don't usually like double dive developers (since legends are legends Runeterra is also here), but it's actually good enough to be here on your own. It's auto-combat. Players put pieces on the board and they go for it until they win or lose. Players deploy and upgrade units as they match. This one is kind of awesome because it has cross-platform support with pc versions and since the controls translate well, there's not much difference between the two. You can easily play on both platforms with the same profile if you want. Thanks for reading!
