The Federal Reserve Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System HeadquartersHeadartersEccles BuildingChairJerome Powell Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, commonly known as the Federal Reserve Board, is the main governing body of the Fed system. It is accused of overseeing Fed banks and helping to implement U.S. monetary policy. Governors are appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate for staggering 14-year term periods. [1] [2] Legal description by law, appointments shall function fair representation of the country's financial, agricultural, industrial, and commercial interests and geographical divisions. [1] As set out in the Banking Act of 1935, the chair and vice chairman of the Board of Directors are two of the seven members of the board of governors appointed by the President. [1] [2] The terms of the seven members of the Board of Directors take several presidential and congressional terms. When a member of the Board of Governors is appointed by the president, he acts more independently. Such independence is unanimously supported by major economists. [3] The Panel is required to present an annual report of the operation to the Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives. [4] It also monitors and regulates the operations of The Federal Reserve Banks, and the U.S. banking system as a whole. The board obtains funding from allegations it evaluates at Fed banks, not from federal funds. Membership by statute is limited in terms of duration, and a member who has served for a full 14-year term is not eligible for re-election. [5] There are several cases in which a person was appointed to serve the remainder of the other member's uncompelled period, and has been re-appointed to serve a full 14-year term. [5] Since upon the expiration of their terms of office, board members must continue to serve as long as their successors are appointed and qualified,[5] may serve for a member significantly longer than a full period of 14 years. It provides for the removal of a board member by the President for the cause. [5] The seat and vice chairman of the Board of Governors are appointed by the President of the Sitting Governors. They both serve a four-year term and they can be elected as many times as president, until their terms on the Board of Governors expire. [1] All seven board members of the Federal Reserve Governors and five Fed Chairs direct open market operations that determine U.S. monetary policy through their membership of the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC). [6] Federal Board of Governors records are found in the n. 82 Record Group at the National Bureau of Archives and Records.
