We love to cook and it is our passion as well as our place to create and make art, it is important - as a cook - to have the necessary kitchen utensils to prepare our dishes properly. Each of these dishes has a special function, so having the right tool will help you achieve your goals every time you want to cook and create. Here's a list of 10 basic dishes you need in your kitchen: pots and pans: pots are needed to cook, cook and mix soups, vegetables, sofrito and other dishes and dishes. Frying pans are necessary for frying, boiling and cooking a wide variety of products. Iron pans are a great alternative to aluminum and copper pans because they distribute the heat more evenly and oven resistant. Glass forms are perfectly served on pastries of stews and other dishes. Spat and mixing spoons: They can be metal, plastic or wood, the joke is that they don't make scratches where you use them and are essential for flip and mold. Knives: Basic, super basic and remember that they should always be sharp because a sharp knife increases the likelihood that you will get cut in addition to not fulfilling your task. The chef's knife should have a blade of 8 to 12 inches and is good for cutting any kind of food. Can opener: Many ingredients can come canned. Cutting board: Essential for cutting ingredients such as fruits, vegetables, proteins. Measuring spoons and caps: Indispensable for a chef because all recipes require accurate measurements. Mixing bowls: Indispensable for mixing sauces, vegetables, dough and other dishes. Choose bowls of at least three different sizes. Strain: Serves to drain pasta especially. Grate and cut into cheese, vegetables, fruits and spices. The four-sided grater will have edges that will allow you to adjust how thick or thin you want your slices to be. Pot holder and oven gloves: Necessary to prevent burns when handling pots, pans and hot dishes, they also provide insulation for heat. Infographic: Alicia O.
