Dear Lifehacker, I share a lot of great files with friends, but it seems that everyone uses a different service. What's the easiest way to do this? Sincerely, slowly TransferDear ST, if you can, the easiest way to share large files with friends when you are near their computer, but it is not always an option. Fortunately, you have a bunch of solid ways to share great files over the internet. Depending on who and what you share, some of your options are better suited than others. Let's see what's best and when. Dear Lifehacker, Let's say I want to share a few files with someone sitting next to me and... Read moreUse Cloud Storage If you have SpaceCloud storage is usually the easiest way to share large files provided that you already have an account and you have room to store. Any of the major cloud storage providers, from Dropbox to Google Drive, has ways to share a link to any file you download to their servers. There's no shortage of online file storage and synchronization services these days, and it's great, but can... More on purpose, most of these services have small file size restrictions. For example, Box allows users to download files only less than 250MB, and even Amazon Cloud Drive covers a 2GB file size, which isn't enough for something like an HD movie. This means that if you share single, very large files, cloud storage often won't do the trick. However, if the file size meets the requirements of a cloud storage provider, this is the easiest way to share a download link with friends. Downloading a file takes some time before you can share it, but if you take your time, this is usually the easiest method. Share the files directly with Opera Unite, BitTorrent, or FTP if you don't want to go through a third-party service, you have a bunch of massive files to share, or you're just tired of messing around with web apps, you can share files directly from your computer with a little tweaking. You have several options here and each one has its strengths and weaknesses. Just a few years ago, one of our favorite ways to share big files was with Opera Unite. Opera Unite has essentially turned the browser into a file-sharing tool where you can easily send and receive files from friends without going through any crazy toolkit. Unfortunately, Opera Unite has been discontinued, but there are workarounds to make it work if you are interested. If you want to share music, movies, photos or other files on the Internet, you have countless... MoreIn another similar option is to customize your own for personal file sharing with BitTorrent. It sounds complicated, but all you have to do is download the software, change a few settings and then point your friends to your private link. You will then use BitTorrent to transfer files to computers and computers. The problem with this method is that you can't do it completely completely and the person you send the files to will also have to download BitTorrent software. However, if you're not too worried about privacy and you're sharing files with someone who's familiar with it, BitTorrent is the way to go. These are dark days for BitTorrent. Using it leaves you open to fake torrents, viruses, provider that Read Family, you can also use free software such as File'illa to turn your computer into your own private FTP server. When you install this, you will share the catalog on your computer with your friends, giving them a network address and password. Then they will be able to download files from this catalog. So you have complete control over when you offer files to your friends and you can revoke access at any time. It takes a bit of technical know-how and it won't be the fastest way to transfer files, but it gets the job done for free and offers you complete control. Download and download files on your home computer from anywhere, turning it into a personal FTP server. More Use the locker for storage, if you do not care about download speedIf the above options are not your bag, you can also use the file locker like any of them. Services like Minus and Mediafire do this so you can upload the file to your servers and then send a link to that file to your friends. Your friends can download the file directly from the link, although sometimes they will have to wait through ads or deal with stifled download speeds if they are not willing to pay for the account. These file lockers are often slow if you don't pay a dick, but they get the job done and the person on the receiving end doesn't need to do anything special to download the file. The FBI shuttered the file-sharing website MegaUpload this afternoon, arrested its executives, and ... Read moreEach of these services all have different size limits to download files, but Wikipedia has a breakdown of their speed and maximum file size. The problem with file lockers is that they are often under the scrutiny of rights holders because they are so often used for piracy. This means that you probably don't want to use any of these services to actually back up, but if you just want to quickly send a link to someone, they are a slow but useful way to do so. There's still no perfect file sharing solution that works for everyone, but depending on your needs, it's pretty easy to share large files with friends provided you know where to look. If you just want to quickly share one file once, storage lockers are a great way to do so, but if you're looking for a long-term solution, you'll want to look into cloud storage Set up the server. Good luck, Lifehacker JJ11/Shutterstock.com IRS is currently accepting 2019 tax returns that must be submitted by April 15, 2020. As usual, most Americans are eligible to file for free through the IRS Free File File as usual, most Americans don't know this. Income below $69,000. IRS Free File Program If your adjusted gross income for 2019 was $69,000 or less, you are eligible for the IRS Free File Program. This program is a partnership between the IRS and commercial tax software companies that make applications such as TurboTax, H'R Block, TaxAct, FreeTaxUSA and Tax Slayer. In some situations, these companies allow you to use their software for free. Here's a critical thing to understand: The free tax filing software available through the IRS Free File Program is different from the standard free edition of each tax program! In other words, the free edition of the TurboTax file program and the free edition of TurboTax are different. If you are eligible for a free file program and you start your tax return through a free file, you can use all the features you want and you won't see any upsells asking you to spend the money. If you start with something like TurboTax Free Edition, which is not a free file program, you will have to pay extra for specific forms and other tax situations. With the IRS Free File, you can use all the forms and complex tax software features of anything you want. To get started, go to the IRS Free File website and see the suggestions. Different applications have different requirements for their offers. For example: Block H'R allows you to file a free federal declaration if your income is $69,000 or less and your age is between 17 and 51. If you are eligible for a free federal return, you will also receive a free state return. TurboTax allows you to file free federal income if your income is $36,000 or less, regardless of your age. You will also receive a free state return if you are eligible for a free federal. Feel free to view the offers on the IRS website. The IRS also offers a tool that will ask about your situation and recommend only relevant suggestions. Based on our experience, we will choose TurboTax if you have the right to do so, and H'R Block if you don't. Both are easy-to-use, well-reviewed tax applications. Note: To take advantage of the IRS Free File offer, you must begin your return by clicking on the IRS free file page or through the IRS Free File Program page delivered to the Tax Software Name page on the tax software website. People who don't know how the IRS Free File Program works end up using more limited free versions of apps such as TurboTax and often have to spend when they will be eligible for the IRS Free File. Fortunately, in 2020, the IRS has made some reforms for this tax filing season. The IRS no longer allows tax software companies to hide their IRS Free File pages from search engines like Google. Anyone: Credit Karma Tax If you are not eligible for the IRS Free File Program, you can still make your taxes online for free. Credit Karma offers free tax filing software without upsells. You can't even pay for Karma Tax is completely free. As with Credit Karma's free credit rating monitoring service, Credit Karma Tax makes money by showing you offers on financial products such as credit cards and loans based on your financial situation. It includes both federal and state filings -- all for free. If you don't need to submit a state refund, you can also look at FreeTaxUSA. This allows you to file a federal refund for free, but requires payment for the return of the state. Please note that the Karma credit tax does not support more complex situations, such as the yield on the part-time state, multiple state returns and the yield of the non-resident state. It also does not support forms such as Form 1116 for a foreign tax credit and schedule K-1 for real estate and target income. Be sure to read the list of forms and situations credit Karma does not support before you decide to use it. In 2020, Credit Karma's tax software has been around for several years, but it's still new compared to its competitors. To double-check Credit Karma, you can run your numbers through a paid software product such as TurboTax before you apply to Credit Karma. You can double-check Credit Karma's work with TurboTax without paying anything, as you only pay TurboTax when you file. If the numbers TurboTax and Credit Karma Tax are the same, you can be sure of the figures of the tax on the loan karma. RELATED: How to view (and monitor) your credit report for free income above $69,000: Free filled forms the IRS also offers free filled forms that anyone can use without any income restrictions. These are basically just electronic copies of IRS normal paper tax forms. They'll get some math for you, but that's it. Don't expect a convenient interview process found in commercial tax software applications. These filled forms may seem intimidating, but they are still simpler than paper forms. When you're done with the forms, you can email directly from the website forms without printing or mailing anything. The IRS only offers federal tax forms, so you're on your own when it comes to your state taxes. Your state can provide free filled forms on its website if it requires you to file a state tax return, but that's up to your state tax agency. Some filled forms have some limitations, so you may have to file a paper declaration (or buy tax software) to do some more complicated things. Don't forget to check out the list of available forms and restrictions on the IRS website before Free filled IRS forms will be most convenient for people who have simple tax situations. If you just need to file a basic refund, they should be pretty simple. If you are familiar with tax forms, these free filled forms should also be faster than filling them manually. You don't have to mail anything, either. What has changed in 2020? This article is very similar to our view of your serve taxes online for free in 2019. That's because little has changed. The IRS Free File Program is still there, Credit Karma is the only tax software that offers free federal and state returns to everyone, and the IRS still offers free filled forms to people whose income makes them ineligible for a free file program. This year, the Free File Program's income limit has been raised a bit: It's now $69,000, not $66,000. The IRS says it hopes that changes to the free file program should also make it easier for more Americans to find and take advantage of the free file software.
