MzielloGetty Images We can't say that enough. We love organized entertainment. Give us an excuse to crack the sheets or play cards at a dinner party and we're there. Whether it's in the form of quizzes or drinking games, we're almost always the ones offering games. But when it comes to chicken parties or baby showers, games are mostly part of the DNA for the occasion. What is a baby shower without a fun game? Here's our pick of the 12 best ones to make part of the proceedings at your next event. Who am I? Everyone likes to look at pictures of themselves as a child, right? Ask anyone who attends the shower to send you a photo of themselves as a child. Then create either a printout of all the anonymous photos with numbers next to them, asking people to get who is who, or create an interactive game by putting blue photos against the wall. Who is this? If guests don't want to submit their own photos (or you know they can't ever get around it..!), why not play the game anyway just with celebrities? The internet is littered with cute photos of your favorite famous people like kids. You can even combine the two by choosing pictures of celebrities and your friends to really throw people. We're having a baby! Split into two teams and stand in equal lines with each other. Each member of the team is given a balloon. When the game starts, the person in front of each queue should blow up the balloon and put it under the t-shirt. Once they are finished, the next player must use his belly to pop the balloon before you start blowing up their own and putting it under their top. The game is won by the fastest team to pop every balloon. Name this song Together a list of songs with the word baby and then get rid of the random word from the lyrics. Get your members to guess which word is missing (without cheating!) through the remaining words and the artist only. For example - I have a baby (Sonny and Cher) Well, baby, I was - (Justin Timberlake) Hey, baby, tell me you (Little Mix) have a drink! Divide into equal teams and stand in two lines opposite each other. Give each person a baby bottle filled with liquid (alcohol works well, or a soft drink like apple juice or milk for non-drinkers). Starting at one end of the line, participants must down the liquid in the bottle, suck on the mouthpiece as quickly as possible. When they are finished, the next person can drink and so on until one team wins. Call that poo Ok, so this one is a bit gross, but kind of great. Melt five different chocolate bars separately (think Toffee Crisp, Snickers, Mars..) and smother each one in a diaper. Line them up and ask guests to guess which chocolate bar is in which diaper. Guess the deadline is OK, so this one fun and more take a hit in the dark. Ask everyone to write down their predictions for the day and time that the child is a child to be born and make a digital list. Once the mother/man with the vagina has given birth, go back and see how close the guesses are. Would she have preferred it? How well do you really know what the mother will be? Make a list of classics you would rather question (and maybe some weird cast there too) and get everything to make a choice. Does she prefer sweet or salty? Is she a morning or an evening person? Would she rather be stuck in an elevator with Tom Hardy or Tom Hanks? Attach sperm to the egg, there's got to be some stupidity, right? Think of a pin tail on a donkey, but a baby shower edition. Print a massive photo of an egg to stick to the wall, and some sperm with a blue tack on the back. Blind each party and spin them around five times before forcing them to try to pin the sperm on the egg on the wall. Invaluable. What's in the bag? Fill an opaque diaper bag with a selection of random baby items. Give each player 45 seconds to put your hand in the bag and guess as many items as they can. Think dummy, rattle, cuddly toys ... And perhaps chuck in a curveball item for good measure. Children's OlympicsIf you have access to a great out-of-space, create a hilarious baby-themed attack course to challenge guests. Think: Buggy racesEgg and spoon racesBaby block building contentsThe possibilities are endless! Dummy bouncing We all love a little apple bouncing on Halloween, so why not make things relevant by bouncing for nipples instead? If it seems too easy (they, y'know, made for bites), you can always create fake tits out of apples and grapes and see how people get on. Cheerful.
