CHEATSWIP HACKSWIP CODESKingHavenohcoolprettycool ROM hacking is the process of modifying ROM images from video games to change graphics, dialogues, levels, gameplay, and/or other elements. This is usually done by video game enthusiasts who tend technically to breathe new life into cherished old games, as creative outlets, or to create unofficial games that essentially use old gaming machines. WikipediaThis is what I'm talking about, miner's Haven copy of the game going around recently that adds items and possibly features, such as the famous Modded Haven. I am referring to the term as ROM Hack for 2 reasons. 1: It's like ROM Hacking, the person takes the basic game, changes scripts and or items and edits the game to have different things. Miner's Haven ROM Hacking is one thing that honestly has to be a thing under certain conditions, like no in-game purchases or anything like that. I fully understand the whole game of stealing things and clickbait to make the game just an easy scam, but for people who for fun, I personally think it's unfair for the person to lower their game after work, maybe days on it. 2: Like Purple Skittles, ROM Hacking is something people do for their work in others with games like Super Mario 64, Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time and game of the like. ROM Hacking can add a lot of ideas that can make a ROM into a completely different game itself. I – again – fully understand the attitude towards the copied Miner's Haven game, but compromises can be made with the actual game and ROM. For those who want to enjoy Miner's Haven with an extra spicy mem or two can make a Rom Hack for players to play, and the cool way to do that is to have a way to Verify the ROM before they install, or they will be demoted otherwise. I understand the whole effort and time it will take to Verify many ROMs, but ROMs can ALSO be verified through public interest in ROMs, so games like Modded Haven might be able to live again under certain constraints. So tldr, I'm for the existence of ROM MH, but they should at least keep checked so that there is no fraud. I fully understand the attitude against them, and I just want to talk about them for a while, because a lot of people love THE MH ROM because of their love for the original. I'm sure Berezaa will most likely oppose this, but I just want to talk about the possibility of ROMs not only being haka'ed by contemporaries as they gain considerable popularity.
