Passive voice is used when the focus is on action. It does not matter or is not known, however, who or what performs the action. Example: My bike was stolen. The above example focuses on the fact that my bike was stolen. I don't know, however, who did it. Sometimes the statement is passively more polite than an active voice, as the following example shows: Example: A mistake was made. In this case, I focus on the fact that a mistake was made, but I do not blame anyone (for example, you made a mistake). Form Passive Object - The Ultimate Form to Be - Past Participation (3rd Column of Irregular Verbs) Example: Letter Was Written. When rewriting active sentences in a passive voice, note the following: the object of the active sentence becomes the subject of a passive sentence, the final form of the verb is changed (to be a past participant) the subject of an active sentence becomes the object of a passive sentence (or discarded) Examples of passive passive sentences with two objects Rewriting an active sentence with two objects in a passive voice means that one of the two objects becomes one of the two objects. object, the other remains an object. Which object to turn into an object depends on what you want to focus on. . As you can see from the examples, adding Rita doesn't sound very elegant. That's why it tended to fail. Personal and impersonal Passive Personal Passive simply means that the object of the active offer becomes the subject of a passive sentence. Thus, each verb in need of an object (transit verb) can form a personal passive. Example: They build houses. Houses are being built. Verbs without an object (non-transitional verb) generally cannot form a personal passive sentence (since there is no object that can be the subject of a passive sentence). If you want to use a non-transient verb with a passive voice, you need a impersonal design - so this passive is called The Impersonal Passive. Example: he says - he said The Impersonal Passive is not as common in English as in some other languages (e.g. German, Latin). In English, Impersonal Passive is only possible with verbs of perception (for example, let's say I know). Example: It is said that women live longer than men. It is said that women live longer than men. While Impersonal Passive is possible here, Personal Passive is more common. Example: It is said that women live longer than men. It is said that women live longer than men. The subject of the subordinated position (women) goes to the beginning of the sentence, the verb of perception is put into a passive voice. The rest of the offer is added using an infinitive design with a k (some verbs and which have fallen). Sometimes the term Personal Passive is used in English lessons if the indirect object of an active sentence is to become the subject of a passive sentence. Offers. An active sentence as I drank two cups of coffee has a theme first (the person or what makes the verb) and then the verb, and finally the object (the person or what the action is going on). So in this example, the subject is me, the verb is drunk and the object is two cups of coffee. But, we don't always have to make suggestions that way. We may want to put the object first, or maybe we don't want to say who did something. This can happen in many ways (see explanation further down the page). In this case, we can use a passive that puts the object first: Two cups of coffee were drunk (we can add on me if we want, but it is not necessary). How to make Passive in English We make passive by putting the verb to be in whatever tense we need and then adding past participle. For ordinary verbs we do past participle, adding 'ed' to the infinitive. So the game gets to play. Click here to learn about irregular verbs. Practice with these exercises Verbs with two objects Some verbs that have two objects can make two different active sentences, and so two different passive sentences too: Give Active: He gave me a book / He gave me a book. You can choose any of the two objects to be the subject of a passive sentence. Passive: I was given a book (them)/ The book was given to me (them). Other verbs like this: ask, offer, teach, say, borrow, promise, sell, throw. Try an exercise about it here need more practice? Get a better English grammar with our courses.
