Other ideas: MIT Museum; Concord Museum; Science Museum, Boston; Boston Children's Museum; The Naismith Children's Museum Of FameThe New Hampshire Children's Basketball Hall in downtown Dover on the banks of the Cochecho River includes a playground, picnic tables, and parking lots – ideal for family trips. At the museum, new visitor facilities include elevators and ramp systems for full access, snack rooms, storage space for coats and snorkeling cars, and special spaces for school trips, presentations and birthday parties. See the calendar of upcoming events. The museum does not serve meals but offers a 1950s-style snack area where families can relax. The snack area has vending machines with a healthier selection of snacks. Visitors can also bring their own snacks or lunches from home. The Exhibition Highlights Yellow Submarines The structure of this two-story educational game is a reconstruction of research submarines and exploration. Sub commands from the control room, send a Morse Code message to the surface, see the ocean environment above you through the periscope, then relax in the sleeping quarters. Equipped with lots of stairs, stairs, tunnels and fast slides. Build it Flying - Aerodynamic Exhibition (our favourite!) Learn about aerodynamics and run your creativity in our Build It, Fly It exhibition. Start at the construction station and your own flying machine engineer using colorful pieces of foam in various forms. Next, place your unique invention into a 30-foot vertical conveyor system, power hands and throw them through ratters. Watch as your invention is removed at the very top to see if flies, flutters or falls. Following in the footsteps of scientists and creators, you can then redesign and redeem your flying machine to try and improve your results. Anyone can be an engineer in this fun and creative environment. Dino Detective Becomes a paleontologist! Place in your lab coat and goggles and dig for triceratops fossils. Take part in the scientific process as you compare the jaws, nails, and vertebrae Triceratops and Tyrannosaurus Rex. The 15-foot lobster boat climbs on this 15-foot lobster boat equipped with functional lobster traps, raincoats, life jackets, and sea creatures. Plot your course through Portsmouth harbour with full-size nautical charts, marine compass, and simple navigation tools. The Post Office Visit the 'full service' post office for mailing letters, buy stamps, and check your PO box. Or, clock in and go to work behind windows – organize letters, wait for customers, and send and collect mail along your path through the museum. Kids really get inside letters are labeled around the museum. Play It Cool Play It Cool is the museum's latest exhibition and it's a hit with all ages! The exhibition features Mindball, a two-player biofeedback game with built-in electroencephalograph (EEG) (EEG) Each player wears an electrode head that monitors thepha and brain theta, the brain relaxes. A player who can be the most relaxed winning game. Arts Centre Dives into the arts project of the day! The Throne Room Palace Pattern is 'under construction.' Tie apron and join the crew of the 'Ye Olde Construction Company,' where 'Pattern is our passion', to help finish the job. Complete the royal throne, stone fireplaces, 'stained glass' windows, and rich floors. This regal environment surrounds you with visual and texture patterns to discover, figure, and manipulate -- from silver tin-walled to one point, murals of perspective, from handmade thrones to royal dragon portraits. Patterns are everywhere! Fun Very Clean and a VisitWe make their way to Dover to visit the Children's Museum, as we haven't since they moved from their location in Portsmouth. We were surprised by the new space. New. Interactive exhibitions and open spaces to explore and very clean. The first exhibition that really got the attention of my children was building & flying machine. We spent a good 20 minutes here. Basically, you make different foam shapes and calm them up to 2 stories on this nice elevator and then you watch how each form floats. Right around the corner they enjoy making music in the colorful wooden walls. The exhibition explores music, beats and sound waves. My personal favorite is the loom area. There are two real wooden looms that you can work on real textiles. Adding to the atmosphere is the vintage photography of real factory workers and dividers who catch the eye full of colorful thread stools. Finally, located upstairs the back corner is the castle room, where everything is puzzles. You can make stained glass windows with wood on the shape, designing floors with carpet pieces, or build a fireplace with velcro brick. Overall, it's a very nice time. We use our Science Museum membership card to get free access. Then after we jumped over the bridge to do some great outlet shopping, and dinner at Tuls. Out With toddlerThe New Hampshire Children's Museum is a fun place to explore. There are many things to do but most activities are heavily developed for my little boy. There is a room on the second floor that is only for children (which most children's museums have: Providence and Boston) but this is much smaller. We enjoyed time but very much done in less than two hours. I think the price is slightly high for a toddler (full price above age 1) because there isn't much to do at that age. There is an outdoor playground (behind) which we enjoy before the museum opens. I'm not going to make a special trip anymore but maybe fun on a rainy day if we're in that area or with older kids (aged school). Cute placeIf you happen to be in the Portsmouth area, this is a fun stop to make with kids. It's not huge, but there's plenty of room to explore. There are three floors. The first floor especially the Big Yellow Submarine - a pretty neat two-story climbing structure. The next floor is really a giant room full of hands on an exhibition with plenty of centers pretending and playing roles. My kids spend a lot of time on lobster boats and really enjoy playing in the post office. They each took a postal bag and filled it with mail, and had send mail to various mailboxes. It would be nice if there were more seating spaces for parents, but it was definitely wider than the Children's Museum in Acton, so there are more places to stand here without feeling narrow. (The Acton Museum is what I would compare it too size and scope). Overall, it's a nice time. We use our Science Museum membership card to get free access. Then after we jumped over the bridge to Kittery to do Great outlet shopping. My day at the Kids Museum, a regular Grade 3 student when I walked at the entrance, my friend, his brother and I always went on the carpet maze. It's very fun. We're fun trying all the different museum activities. The new exhibition is all about world music, and it's neat to see all the different instruments and listen to a wide variety of music. I also love rooms with golf balls and send them down the track and make my own tracks for them. It was a great day and we had so much fun I couldn't wait to do it again. Information often changes. We can't guarantee it. Verify with the New Hampshire Children's Museum before making trucks. If you find an error, please report it... It's clear they have put a lot of effort and planning to reopen them. We'll be back soon. - My Family's Shawm Lafferty has a membership to the children's museum and we have missed so many months ago. I made a booking played there this morning and I am very proud of all their hard work to make sure we survived. The game area is clean, items are removed if they are too difficult to clean, one way of walking (of course sometimes children have other ideas), one family / group at the exhibition, so many areas to wash or to your hands, and still so many opportunities to play, imagine and learn!
