Dear me, You and I are going back to the beginning. We are one hundred percent connected so that no one will or could ever understand. We were there, standing together. Sometimes he cries in the shower, sometimes snoring through his nose, but it's always been you and me. Always and forever... Or it should have been, but I left you some time ago, I left you floundering on my own, relying on love and encouragement and strength from others, from strangers, when it was me who had to hold you. When it was me who had to hug you and praised you and praised you for the wonderful person you are- for all the beauty and life you bring to this world. I rarely tell you how much I love you. As much as I admire him. How beautiful and caring and smart and strong you are. That you're my hero. I had to tell you to ignore jeers and snickers. Don't change what others think. Don't be afraid to be different. Don't be ashamed of who you are. Worst of all, I had to ignore jeers and snickers. I didn't have to worry about what people thought. Because in doing so, I said terrible things that would embarrass you. I took you for granted and didn't hang out. I told you it wasn't enough. So if you were a better teacher, a better wife, a better friend, a better writer, a better lover... then I'll keep you If you were more confident, more social, social, tenacious, then I would respect you. If you had fewer sun spots, if you ate less carbohydrates, if you were bolder and thick skin, if you were a mother, if you achieved your goals, then I want you. I told you things I wouldn't say to my worst enemy, and you took it and internalized every word you called. And that's why I didn't let you down. I had to be there for you. I had to take care of him. I had to fight more to be the person you deserved. I had to protect, protect and cherish you. I'm so sorry I let you down. I'm sorry you hurt, left, don't remind you every second of the day how wonderful you are. How worth you are. How brave and kind and powerful you are. Please, I'm sorry. You are significant. You are worthy. You're beautiful. You are smart. You are strong. That's enough for you. I know you're going through tough times right now. That life didn't give you what you expected, and it didn't set you up the way you thought. I know that you are disappointed and sometimes feel like a failure or that it is all your fault. But the truth is that you are not more failure than you could ever have. You are strong and brave and honest, and you will overcome. You persevere and come out the other side more than you've ever seen before. Together, we are sufficient. We will conquer this new future. I have you and this time I won't let go. Ever. This time I'll take you first. I will respect you and respect you and cherish you. Love eternity. Melf you are ever feeling down or unworthy, try to write a love letter to yourself. You will be surprised by all the healing that can take place. Video on how important it is to write a love letter to yourself.
