That is one seriously Photoshopped picture. There has to be glue involved to get the top half of these English cupcakes to stick there like this. The reality of this gadget, solo or double, is really better than the image. Read more below. Main recipe: Print Recipe 1 English cupcake, split 1 slice of American cheese 1 slice of Canadian bacon 1 large egg, lightly scrambled 1 Prehet Breakfast Sandwich Maker before green PREHEAT light comes. Lift the lid, top ring and cooking dish. 2 Place the bottom half of the English bun, split-side up in the lower ring of the Breakfast Sandwich Maker. Top with cheese and Canadian bacon. 3 Lower cooking plate and top ring. Add the egg to the cooking dish. 4 Top with the remaining half of the bun, split-side down. 5 Close the lid. Cook for 4 to 5 minutes. 6 Slide the cooking stove by rotating the handle clockwise. Lifting cover and rings; carefully remove the sandwich with a plastic spatula. I'm in my 60s, and I don't like ham. Never was, never will be. In truth, I'm a vegetarian, anyway, so not eating ham isn't a big loss. I'd use Morningstar Farms sausage or something. Check out the recipe links below as you can go crazy with creativity. Other recipes below. Reality/Verdict: If you want to say it works well, you might find good enough in this gadget not to be stretching the truth. At the end of about 6 minutes or so you will be rewarded with an English muffin egg sandwich, which is really very good. Up you get a hot egg sandwich, fixed pretty much the way you want, for a few minutes. Fresh. Delicious. Made without too much fuss, time or clutter. The downside is that by the time the egg is firm enough for me, the bottom part of that bottom bun will be somewhat overbaked. I must add, I do not like a runny egg, so your mileage can vary. Also, you are baking the top English cupcake in the eggs. Right in them. That's fine, just know that you can't overload that egg with a ring, because there's got to be room for this top half of the cupcake. Keep in mind that most English cupcakes will fit into the rings, but quite a few bagels will not. They're just too big for a slot. Find a bagel that works and stick to it. And check that picture is upstairs. There is no way that the lid will close over this bagel. Just know. Croissants will work if trimmed. Total: I like it. I use it from time to time as it is easier than cooking an egg in a frying pan inside a ring and putting an English muffin in a toaster. Saved time: Just a few minutes, but while this thing is cooking you can read the newspaper/online news or go brush your teeth. It's a loud device after downloading. Download. Wipe clean with a paper towel. Note: Let this gizmo pre-heat so the raw egg doesn't pour through the cracks when you pour it into the egg ring. Rating: B and it makes Mr. GizmoCuisine.com happy, but really, you could do without it. More... It really works very well... So... just get one. Buy: Competition: There really is nothing straight like this, one device that cooks an egg, toasts a cupcake and melts cheese. Yes, there's the Hamilton Beach Breakfast Burrito Maker, which does pretty much the same thing, but with a large egg section and a heated burrito shell. Or, you could buy something like Nostalgia 3-in-1 Breakfast Station, but it's not quite the same, right? It's more like a regular oven and toaster, in one, yes, but not to the same extent. There are no saved steps. OK, it's great for gadget fanboys/girls, but actually, I mean it, it's just not the same... which means you can buy that too. © I also threw a few other similar, but not the same, gadgets below.
