Hi, I'm so glad you're here. You are looking for the Five Love Languages Test for kids printable, right? I can't wait to share it with you, but before I do it, you need to know a few things... Parents are always looking for ways to teach their child faster, have good behaviour, or perform better at school. What if I told you that I knew the secret? I have worked with children for over 20 years, both as an educator and a mother. I want to let you in on some secrets. Parents – this concept of love languages is easy to put into action! If you're ready: Get a little time for yourself. Feel more peace in your own home. Get your child to listen better and have fewer breakdowns. Find answers to why some behavior happens. And.... best of all.... send you on a path to healthy relationships in the future with your children. Here are the 3 Secrets you should know before you jump into learning about the 5 Love Languages. 1. Love Languages Secret to Love Your Child The #1 of parents is to meet their child's need for love. We love them so much that we feel we're doing it all wrong! Wait. You thought it was just you? Could there possibly be a right way to love your child? What if you say I'm not what your child needs? What if they buy gifts, don't they speak to their hearts? What if this child needs you to spend more time with them. Could it be as easy as that? Yes! 2. Love Languages Secret to Loving Your Child A Beloved Child Is Ready to Learn from Teachers and Parents! You cannot learn or discipline without a love foundation. As a teacher I see my children are not their Love Language spoke to them at home. They come to school that needs to be loved first, then they can learn. At home my children are sometimes disobeyed and need correction. If I fill them with the love they need, then they are more open to correction. Once they feel loved, in their special way, they are ready to learn. A beloved child has: a full love tank emotional health less behavioral issues less need for peer and teacher attention and is not so influenced by peer pressure Why? You have filled them with so much good love, they need less to seek it from the outside world. They're like few sponges. Fill a sponge with water, it is so saturated that there is no longer room for water to come in. The same thing works for kids. 3. Love Languages Secret to Love Your Child Learning How to Love Your Child will also benefit your other relationships. Many marriages and other relationships have been improved after learning the Five Love Languages! Where did I see it? When my husband loves me by doing the dishes. When I spend time with my mother on her birthday doing whatever she wants. When I give a perfect gift to a friend who loves gifts. When I compliment a collaborator in public and specifically for a job well done. These words speak directly to their lives. Breathe life in and fill their love tanks. We are healthier when we are in healthy relationships with other people. Our families and our children are also healthier and happier. You can use love languages to appreciate people in business, to support friends, and to show a partner you care about. Take the Love Language quiz now to see which of the five love languages are yours! Which one of these talks to the way you feel cared for, or like to show you appreciate someone: Quality time quality time is about spending time together enjoying each other's company. People who need quality time alone yearn time with their loved ones, and want to catch them up by time alone where they can speak and bind. You must be alone time if you continually desire yourself to be with someone, not just hear from them or write to them. You don't feel satisfied or happy unless you can be with the person or the people you love. Physical Touch Physical touch shows love by pressing, pressing, intimate, or just getting a caring hand on someone's shoulder. People who need physical touch want you to embrace them, they want to hug time, and always show PDA or public exhibitions of love to feel that you love them, and to demonstrate their love for those they care about. You need physical touch if you feel lonely and lost when you weren't physically near a loved one. You constantly yearn to be close to those you care about, and you demonstrate your love for them with hugs, massage, and even sit close together. Gifts The love language of gifts does not require large or extravagantly expensive gifts. These can be notes, CDs, flowers, or a dough. These little gifts are signs of love to the erven or recipient. People who need gifts feel validated when you spend money and/or time choose something out for them. Often, the saying this is the thought that scores really apply here. You need gifts if you think or anxiously wait for holidays or birthdays to see what your loved ones can get you. Gifts are usually a great test in relationships for people who speak the love language of gifts. Acts of Servings are acts of love when someone performs an action for the other. It can clean, cook, drive, or even do an edge. By doing that act of service, the other person feels love or shows love. People who need acts of service sometimes will ask their loved ones for favors or edges, not because it is easier, but rather because they need the confirmation of the other person's love. You should feel acts of service if you feel undesirable or unimportant, if someone doesn't follow by on a promise, or if someone doesn't do anything you asked. Words of confirmation Words of confirmation are verbal clues for others to express love and care for Words of confirmation can also be compliments and reassurances that confirm inner love in an outer way. People who need words of confirmation must hear about the people they regularly love, and to feel loved, they need to hear aloud what the other person thinks. You need words of confirmation if you need yourself constantly to hear from your loved one to get reassurance from them. People who want words of confirmation can also be fishing for compliments because that's the way they feel the most loved. Typically, people have one main love language and one secondary one. It is important to know this so you can ask for what you need, and so you can show your partners, friends, and colleagues appreciation in the way they like to receive it. It.
