It heats up, creates pressure, but steam does not come out. Please help. Rita from Cleveland. OHBest AnswerTake it back or do it; To solve the problem no steam comes out or the pair comes out without pressing the button. Do it.1. Remove the two screws from the steamer and then remove the final cap.2. Remove the screw from the bottom area of the handle.3.Top steamer, remove two screws under a round rubber valve around to fill the hole.4. Removed the back of the handle, the top of the steamer, in front of the steamer, where the nozzles are attached. Remove the plastic tube where the steam comes out.6. Now look into the hole where the steam goes out and remove the 1/4 inch nut, metal washer, and the rubber washer.7. Take a small punch and lightly brass rod until it pops back.8. Remove the brass rod and spring. Spring, spring will have a white crud on it and in the hole where it came out. Clean the hole and spring very well. This will solve the problem of steam always coming out of the press of a button. 9. Clean the brass rod, spring and hole in which they enter. I use a very small round wire brush. As the kind that you could use to clean the gun. 10. Spray about WD40 into the hole and onto the brass rod, then put a few drops of oil on the rod. Roll it all together and it will work like a new one.12 Don't use tap water in the steamer and you won't get build up.good luck. The answer was it helpful? 6 6
