Remind is a communication platform for teachers and students to talk to each other. Web software also has several useful features, such as sharing files and translating messages. This platform is designed for both offline and online teachers. As a teacher, you can send schedules, photos, files or even quizzes through messages to all students. Remind acts as a social network for educational purposes. Professors can easily contact their students as well as their parents without having to request personal numbers or emails. The website can also tell you if all your students have received your message or if someone is missing it. Educators start by creating a class that can function as a group in certain social networks. This is where teachers message everyone in the classroom. The platform also allows you to send private messages to a student or his parents. Parents makes educational resources such as Powerpoint lessons accessible to everyone. Parents can also see your messages. All documents, spreadsheets, and other files are available under the Files tab for everyone in the class to access. Integrated Platforms and Other Features Educational Platform also supports other resources to help you with class abilities. This includes a Google class that provide students with course jobs and their grades. You can also use a monkey quiz and review for exercise or after-school activities. Another way to recall can help you is the translation feature. You can translate any posts on the site into some of the most commonly used languages, such as Spanish, French and Korean. This can help you understand what your students can say. It also allows you to communicate with people who can only speak a particular language. Where can you run this program? The Remind website is available through any browser. You can also use a mobile phone app that is compatible with android 4.4 or better phones, as well as iOS 10.0 and up. Is there a better alternative? A good alternative to Remind is Twiducate. A social media app that provides a private platform for both teachers and students. The app is compatible with Google Docs and YouTube. Remind fulfills its goal of providing you and your students with a social media platform for effective messaging and sharing. It also goes beyond its function with integrating other websites and platforms such as Google Docs. You can also contact international students or teachers with Remind. The only limitation of the site is the 140-character limit, which is similar to Twitter, before it doubled the character limit. Should you download it? Yes, a free account provides teachers with the tools they need to communicate and provide resources to the class. Watch videos from the Internet from YouTube for Android. But what if you use another provider for your email? Outlook (which Hotmail is currently a part of) is one of the most popular free email services on the web. If you're using Outlook or Hotmail's email address, you'll need to set them up on your Android device. Fortunately, it's pretty simple. Two Ways to Connect There are a huge number of email apps for Android, especially for power users who deal with a lot of email every day. Most people are better fed sticking with two large name apps. If you only use Outlook or Hotmail, or if you're trying to stay away from Google apps, then the official Microsoft Outlook client is one of those to choose from. If you use Gmail with your Microsoft account, you should stick to the official Gmail app. We'll look at the benefits of both, and how to set them up. The official forecast for android App Although it shares a name, Outlook for Android doesn't have much to do with its desktop counterpart. It's clean, easy to use, and not overloaded with features - although features that it has help to make it one of the best mobile email apps: Multiple account support. Outlook isn't just limited to your Outlook or Hotmail accounts. It also works with Google, Yahoo and iCloud accounts, as well as Exchange and IMAP accounts. Focused mailbox. Outlook filters the most important messages into a focused inbox for easy access. He continues What's important based on what you read and reply etc. Everything else goes to another inbox. Comprehensive cloud integration. Outlook automatically integrates with your OneDrive cloud storage account, and you can add Dropbox and Box accounts Perfect for adding and saving attachments. Scheduled messages. Is there an important letter that can wait until later? You can carry it with one napkin. It will be temporarily hidden from your inbox until the set time and date, after which you will also receive a new notification to remind you to respond. How to set up Outlook app on Android When you launch the Outlook app you will see the Screen of the Add account. Select Outlook for your Microsoft account, even if your email address hotmail.com or even live.com. Now follow the simple instructions on the screen by adding your email address and password. If you have two-factor authentication enabled, as if you wanted to keep your account safe, you also need to enter the code here. That's all there is to it. Hit the cog icon in the top right corner to access the settings. From there, turn on the focused mailbox if it hasn't. The filter button on the mailbox screen allows you to filter messages further, showing only unread or tagged messages, or messages with attachments. At the bottom of the screen, you get quick access to Microsoft calendars and contacts, as well as files that show attachments and files from related cloud accounts. Download: Outlook for Android (free) Using Outlook with Gmail Gmail App works with almost every type of email account and create Outlook, Hotmail, or Live accounts without any manual configuration. By default, an account that is not Gmail in Gmail does not offer an email push address. Instead, the app will check your account every 15 minutes - or of your choice - to check if there are new messages. However, you can add push support using the Gmailify option. This is one of several great features in Gmail, including: a single mailbox. Select all mailboxes from the sidebar, and you'll be able to see all the messages from all accounts in a single mailbox. It's much easier than constantly switching accounts. Integration with Android. Using your Outlook or Hotmail account with Gmail gives you more integration with the rest of Android, including the default Contacts app. Gmailify. Once you've set up, you get the opportunity to Gmailify your account. This effectively turns your third-party email account into a Gmail account without changing your email address. Control and filter spam. The Gmailified account gives you access to extended Gmail filtering to help you keep control of your busy inbox. You will also get powerful spam controls that keep your inbox completely junk free. How to access Outlook in Gmail App Open Gmail and sidebar from the left edge of the screen. Click on a small arrow next to your account name and select an Add account. Click Outlook, Hotmail and Live from the list of customization options available. Enter your email address, password, and two-factor authentication code if you use it. Finally finally you need to give the Gmail app permission to access your account, so click Yes when asked. The account options page completes the setup. You can save by default, which include checking new emails every 15 minutes. It will take a few seconds for your outlook to download emails. You can then see your inbox. At the top of the screen is the ability to use Gmailify. Click Give it a try to get started and then click through the subsequent screens. When you Gmailify your account, all your emails are automatically imported into your Gmail account. They will be sorted and filtered just like regular Gmail emails. When you respond to any of these emails, you will continue to use your Outlook (or other) email address. Gmailify also has other advantages. This gives you more powerful search options. It integrates an account with Google Now maps. And it gives you more advanced notifications, especially on Nougat. The downside of Gmailify is that Google can scan data from your emails unrelated to Google that you may or may not be happy with. Either way, it's easy to give up again. Click on your connected Google account on the Gmail sidebar and select the Unlink account option for your Microsoft account. Download: Gmail for Android (free) What works for you?
