Dan Stone Updated August 23, 2017 If you want to watch Netflix on your TV, there's a chance that you already have the equipment you need to do so. The Netflix streaming app is available for smart TVs, Smart Blu-ray players, game consoles, consoles and computers. Most Netflix devices use home Wi-Fi networks; However, some of them can be used with an old-fashioned Ethernet cable. Smart TV Streaming If you have a Smart TV, you don't need to connect any other devices to your TV to use Netflix. According to PC Magazine, Smart-TV is an internet TV that supports streaming video from content providers, among other internet applications. Before using the Netflix app on Smart TV, set up an Internet connection device via a wi-fi router or Ethernet cable connection. Smart TV can run Netflix through an app icon located in the system menu. Some remotes will have Netflix fast access buttons. If the app is not yet installed, check the manufacturer's updates or app store features through the TV itself for the app. Streaming consoles If you don't have a Smart TV, teleco boxes are the most affordable option for watching Netflix on your TV. Popular TV-supported boxes include Apple TV, Roku and Amazon Fire. In addition, Smart Blu-ray players have built-in set-top box features and can run the Netflix app as well. If the device doesn't come with an installed Netflix app, you can download it from the device app store - just connect the TV installation to your TV and home network to get started. Game consoles If you bought a game console released at any time since the end of 2005, you have a device compatible with Netflix. The Netflix app is available on game consoles including PlayStation 3, PlayStation 4, Xbox 360, Xbox One, Wii and Wii U. Each console requires you to install the Netflix app before you can use it. You can download the Netflix app on PlayStation consoles by selecting a Netflix icon under the headlines of the Video or TV and Video menu. You can find the Xbox version of the app in the Live store and as the Wii and WiiU host the app in Nintendo eShop. Using Your PC Instead using the Netflix app on your device, you can connect your computer to your TV. The easiest way to connect a desktop or laptop to your TV is to use a computer's HDMI port if it has one. The HDMI connection will handle both audio and video, requiring only one cable. To set up the connection, connect the cable to the TV and computer ports and allow the computer to handle the automatic configuration of the second screen. The system should reflect the image on both screens. If you're running Windows 10, you can download the Netflix app from the Microsoft store; otherwise, you can simply download and watch Netflix in any web browser. Halloween season is upon us, and that can only mean one thing: creepy content coming to So get ready to play your scary nights accordingly. Obviously, not everyone leaving and coming to Netflix in October is made for scary movie nights. Along with spooky thrillers and diabolical TV shows, Netflix is also adding a few more light-hearted originals this month. Fans can expect a new batch of episodes of Unsolved Mysteries in time for the spooky season with Volume 2 expected on October 19. In addition, a new take on the streaming service for the classic thriller, Rebecca, starring Lily James and Armie Hammer is set to premiere October 21. And of course, the spooky Netflix show of them all, Ghosts returns for Season 2 with Ghosts of Bly Manor on October 9. For those of you who aren't such big fans of Halloween fright, Netflix is also taking advantage of October (and Oscar season) to debut some prestigious projects like Aaron Sorkin in Trial Chicago 7, starring recent Emmy winners Jeremy Strong and Yahya Abdul-Mateen II. Here's a closer look at the movies and TV shows coming to Netflix this month you're going to want to look at. Ghosts Hill House - Coming October 9nd installment of the Ghost anthology series is finally here, and just in time to creep you in for Halloween. The Ghosts of Bly Manor is another adaptation, this time based on Henry James's Turn the Screw. Like Ghosts Hill House, this season will explore a house haunted by ghosts, both familiar and otherwise, and the family is unlucky enough to live there. BLACKPINK: Light Up the Sky - The upcoming October 13th Netflix brings K-pop sensation BLACKPINK on board with a new documentary. The film will feature exclusive interviews with band members, as well as behind-the-scenes footage of Jisoo, Jenny, Rose, and Lisa rising to fame. Unsolved Mysteries: Volume 2 - Coming up on October 19, Unsolved Mysteries, a true crime of docuseries that spawned countless theories on Reddit, and even led to the re-discovery of some cases, returns with a brand new batch of episodes. Look for even darker mysteries, and be prepared to take notes for your theories later. The trial of Chicago October 7 - October 15, Asron Sorkin is back behind the camera for Netflix's Trial Chicago 7, a retelling of the trial that followed the protests at the 1968 Democratic National Convention. The film will no doubt be a topic of discussion as the awards season approaches, as does it stars Eddie Redmayne, Jeremy Strong, Yahya Abdul-Mateen II, Sacha Baron Cohen, and Mark Rylance. Emily In Paris - October 2 you ever watched Sex in the City and thought: Do I want it to be in Paris? Emily in Paris is a show for you. Created by Darren Star, the man behind Sex in the City and Younger, Netflix stars new dramedy stars Lily Collins as Emily Cooper, a twenty-something American who moves to Paris for marketing work. The 40-year-old version is coming October. Rada Blank stars in this Netflix original film about a woman, Radha, who struggles to do so as a playwright in New York. So she does what someone will do: she decides to change careers and become a rapper, RadhamusPrime, who talks about what it's like to be a 40-year-old woman in town. Schitt's Creek Season 6 - Coming October 7GP Images/Getty Images Entertainment/Getty Images Fresh off his Emmy sweep, the final season of Schitt's Creek coming to Netflix. Fans of the Canadian sitcom who watched through Netflix were patiently waiting to see what was happening to the Rose family, and that wait was finally coming to an end. Prince and I - Coming October 1, Julia Stiles stars as Paige Morgan, a diligent premed student who becomes fascinated by a wealthy Danish student named Eddie (Luke Mably), in this 2004 rom-com. She soon learns that Eddie's heir is apparently to the throne of Denmark, and the two must decide if the fairytale romance will work. We've always lived in a castle - Coming October 1st on Shirley Jackson's 1962 romance of the same name, this mystery thriller follows two sisters (Alexandra Daddario and Taissa Farmiga) who live in isolation with their uncle after a family tragedy years ago. When a cousin (Sebastian Stan) arrives at a visit, dark secrets unravel. Song Explosion - Coming up on October 2th based on a famous podcast of the same name, this original docuseries follows major musicians as they offer insight into how they brought one of their songs to life. Alicia Keys, Lin-Manuel Miranda and Tai Dolla $ign are just some of the artists willing to provide in-depth interviews, archival footage and recordings of their work. Social Distance - Coming October 13th Reflecting the wild, wild times in which we currently live, this original tragicomic eight-part anthology series (shot virtually and in isolation, of course) will chronicle both the dark and humorous ways that people sought to stay connected while quarantined apart among COVID-19. Dream Home Makeover - Coming October 15 Like addictive and soothing offers of queer eye, cleaning up with Marie Kondo, and getting organized with Home Edit, this Netflix makeover series follows Shea and Sid McGee's studio as they help families renovate and renovate their homes from gray to stunning. The Great Army - Coming October 16, students at a public high school in Brooklyn, New York take on the chaotic world of racial and social injustice, mass shootings and relationships in netflix's gritty teen drama that evokes a world of euphoria - minus the glitter of the face and all. Lily James stars as a newlywed who arrives at her husband's (Army Hammer) family estate on the English coast in this Netflix original mystery movie. Soon she finds herself in the shadow of her first wife, whose legacy continues to live long after her death. Yes, God, yes - coming Oct. October. Things star Natalia Dyer sheds her Nancy Wheeler persona in this 2019 coming-of-age comedy drama as Alice, a Catholic schoolgirl in the early 2000s who explores her sexuality through masturbation, and struggles with her urges in the face of eternal curses. Over the Moon - Coming up with the October 22 Netflix original with an all-star cast, this animated film from Glen Keen follows an adventurous Chinese girl named Fei Fey who builds a rocket ship to the moon to prove the existence of the legendary goddess of the moon. Philippa so, Sandra O, John Cho, and Ken Jeong provide voiceover. Holiday - Coming October 28th, Thanksgiving will still be the month when Holiday premieres on Netflix at the end of October, but the heart wants what it wants - even if it's Christmas movies before

Halloween. Rom-com stars Emma Roberts as a girl who, without having much of the other, does business with the person who shares her one home: they will date each other each holiday event for one year. The gambit of the queen - October 23 Gambit of the queen - is a new Netflix mini-series starring Anya Taylor-Joy as chess prodigy Beth, who seeks to win the world of competitive chess, which is dominated by men. Based on the novel by Walter Tevis, the series will see Beth grow from an orphan into a fearless adversary with a drug problem. Burlesque - Leaving October 31, Christine Aguilera/YouTubeChristina Aguilera and cult favorite Cher, Burlesque, sadly leaving Netflix in October. Campy musical about a young woman (Xtina) who travels to Hollywood to become a singer, and finds a home in the Burlesque Club run by Cher.Magic Mike - Leaving October 31warner Bros. Pictures/YouTubeChanning Tatum officially went from dance film Hottie to movie star with Magic Mike, a film he developed based on his own experience as a stripper. The film isn't all fun and games though, as newcomer Adam (Alex Pettifer) falls in love with a lifestyle, leaving Mike (Tatum) trying to keep him from doing something he'll regret. Sleepless in Seattle - Leaving October 31If you haven't seen the classic Meg Ryan-Tom Hanks rom-com Sleepless in Seattle, you're going to want to hurry up and watch it before it leaves Netflix for Halloween. The film is iconic for a reason, and will certainly bring you some much needed cheer. Sleeping With Other People - Leaving October 1, Alison Brie and Jason Sudeikis star in Sleeping With Other People, an off-beat rom-com about two old friends who bump into each other at a sex addicts meeting. What first begins as a friendship soon becomes more complex as each of them learns how to be in a real relationship - with other people.
