For some Android users, Google Play is the only legitimate source of apps and games. Google Market with programs and games to download directly to an Android device, such as a phone or tablet. Just like Android TV. However, there are many other sources of access to apps, such as the device manufacturers markets such as the Samsung Galaxy Store. But apps available in Google Play and the Samsung store can also be downloaded using external tools and from special databases such as the APK Mirror. What does APK Mirror mean? APK Mirror not only allows you to download what Google Play offers or other app stores, but also allows you to download apps that are not theoretically available on Google Play or any other store. That's one of the advantages. Second, everything is in one place without having to jump around app stores. After all, APK Mirror not only offers access to current, up-to-date versions of the app, also in beta, but allows you to download apps of reverse versions, no longer officially available for installation, such as in glasses for slams. This is a cool option for app developers, but also for users looking for a solution to a phone problem or the app running. In APKMirror, you can filter your application database by looking for the developer's name and name. If you open the app, you'll see detailed information about the app, including available versions, file size, system and hardware requirements, and when the app version was downloaded or published on Google Play. You can download the app to your computer or mobile device by scanning the CD code. Is it safe to download apps from APK Mirror? But is the APK Mirror safe? You're sure I'll download a clean installation rather than an infected file. APK, who will take control of my phone after installation? Who are the creators of APK Mirror? So, APK Mirror is safe and downloading apps from there is safe. As the users themselves confirm (and you can confirm this too) .zip and MD5 signatures are intact. However, you should know that the APK Mirror, despite its many benefits also has one drawback. A defect that is not directly related to the service as users. In APK Mirror, you'll find many versions of even the same app. They are designed for specific phones, system versions and even the region. This means that if you don't make sure you download, you may find that the .apk app you downloaded just won't work. Of course, you can download the android game store for a region that is not entirely designed for you. However, this does not mean that you will immediately install all the applications that you don't normally see in the Polish version. As always, be careful when downloading side apps. From my own experience, I haven't encountered any problems when downloading apps from the APK Mirror site, but as I wrote above, it is necessary to check what we download and whether this is definitely what we were looking for. Who created the APK Mirror? According to information from Google, APK Mirror and web apkmirror.com the site is run by the same people who are behind the AndroidPolice.com. It is one of the largest sites dedicated to Android (Android). All downloaded files are manually verified and approved by administrators, and there are no paid applications that may be suspected of breaking the law. It also means that there are no hacked applications. Since you already have a Play Store on your Android device, only an app signed with the same key as the current version will be able to update the app. This extra security is simply due to the operation of Android. Of course, you can also download and install apps from an unknown source. If you download an app from apkmirror.com, you should be safe. For more information about the security of downloaded files and their compatibility with Google Play versions, please refer to the frequently asked questions on the www.apkmirror.com website - click here and find out: What steps do you take to make sure that all downloaded APK files are real and created by the right developers? How does APK Mirror protect against scammers? Users who use the service and create their own apps can download their Android programs to APKMirror. Theoretically, in this way, anyone can change files and paste malicious code to steal our data and other things. In order to eliminate this risk, APKMirror checks all APK files on its website and ensures that everything is in order and that the signatures of .zip and MD5 are intact.
