These cooling devices work to keep your food and drinks chilled and free of spoiling. Dometic refrigerators get their power from the RV battery system as well as through propane tanks if the installation will be so equipped. Using the Dometic refrigerator requires the device to start and set the temperature in the desired settings. Keep the RV ventilated if you smell the gas when using Dometic. Items you'll need a 5/8-inch Crescent wrenchLighter go to Dometic and make sure it's at least one inch off the wall and floor. RV have these units preinstalled, but for the sake of safety, check the distance. Tighten the gas hose connection at the back of the Dometic with the Crescent Wrench key. Turn right to tighten until the hose clamp is as tight as the controllable. Turn the power selector switch to the desired power source; electricity or gas settings are on the sensor. Set according to your needs and connections. Make sure that three plug prongs are in the RV wall socket when using the electric power option. When using LP gas, make sure the tank is open and the gas is flowing. Go to the RV tank and turn the dial left to open the gas stream. Click ignition button until you hear a click and spark on an experimental pipe under Dometic when using LP gas. Open the Dometic door and find the temperature sensor. Turn the settings to suit your needs and close the door. Allow the block to cool before filling with food and drinks. Use the electric power option while traveling. The device will draw energy from the DC battery bank, which is charged from the engine. Use LP gas if it is not connected to an external electrical source.
