The content index Young children can sometimes recognize and read letters, but it is still difficult to write them. There are many ways you can help your child develop the skills needed for writing. At the age of 3 and 4, children start using their hands and fingers to draw in a more detailed way and may start to copy the letters of the shape. This requires coordination and control, which most young children still develop. These skills are called small motor skills. Simple patterns Depending on what your native language is, letter shapes may be unfamiliar. Moving from left to right may be too much. To help children develop their small motor skills, you can work with them on simple models that go from left to right. These sheets will give you some ideas about the kinds of repetitive patterns that can help your child. Encourage your child to try to trace along the line carefully. Tracking Patterns 1 - From First Friends 1 Activity Book Page 9 (PDF, 33KB) Tracking Patterns 2 - from First Friends 1 Numbers Book Page 6 (PDF, 35KB) The practice of writing forms your child is likely to start writing letters quite large. They will need to practice writing letters to a smaller size. Try using these sheets with your child. Each sheet has two letters that have a similar shape or are sometimes confused. The child starts by tracking a large version of the letter to make the form clear to them. The big point shows the child where to start the letter. They are then traced to some smaller ones. The next step is to copy the letter. Help your child see the difference between the two letters on the page. See if your children know more words, starting with these letters, or any words that include these letters. You can also practice writing capital letters in a similar way. - Below are all of The Family and Friends of Alphabet Book Writing C (PDF, 48KB) Letter-letter of e (PDF, 45KB) Letter of writing i l (PDF, 67KB) Письмо написания т f (PDF, 67KB) Письмо написания г н n 47KB) Letter m h (PDF, 46KB) Letter b p (PDF, 34KB) Letter of writing q g (PDF, 57KB) Letter-letter y j (PDF, 45KB) Letter-letter u d (PDF, 41KB) Letter-letter v w (PDF, 36KB) Letter writing x k (PDF, 37KB) Letter letter s z (PDF, 51KB) Creating an alphabet poster As your child works on your letter. Your child can write letters (bottom body and upper body) and draw or paste an image of a word that starts with that letter. There are ideas for words on the sheets of writing. Here are a few more: apple, boy, cat, dog, egg, fish, girl, hat, ice cream, jeans, kite, lamb, mouse, nest, orange, plane, queen, rabbit, snake, train, umbrella, violin, wolf, fox, yo-yo, zebra. Writing numbers your child also learns to write numbers. Here are some simple practical sheets to help them form numbers. There are also a few simple account tasks. As an Amazon Associate I earn from qualifying purchases. My cute little kid is now my two (I can hardly believe it!) and talk up the storm. We love to see how much he absorbed what we told him during the first two years of his life - as well as watching what he doesn't know. (He finally realized that a cat is not a dog.) My two loves page are through emerging readers that I created for my older brothers. They're just the right size for his little hands. So I decided to create it with my own set of little books - but instead of seeing the words of readers, they would set simple alphabet books. (This post contains affiliate links.) Does this post look different than the last time you visited? Books have been updated! Why I created these simple alphabet books: create a simple library of books that my two could call their own use of simple photos - mostly photos - that would catch his eye to mark each picture with one word to build their vocabulary and let him read together to repeat the letter on each page so that he will begin to recognize the alphabet alphabet something special that's also interchangeable - since many toddlers aren't always kind to books. How to use my ABC books: Read them out loud to your kid or kid. Let your kid handle the books himself - you can always go back and print a book that has been torn. Give them to your preschooler to read yourself. He may even start accepting some words. He can also enjoy reading them to his little brother! If you are doing a letter of the week's activity in your home or classroom, print out the relevant letter book for your child (ren). Give the books as a gift. While it is against my terms of use to give a PDF file to someone else, you can and is encouraged to print and collect any of my printed give as a gift. I packed them up and mailed them to my little nephew for Christmas (shortly before his first birthday). A quick video of me reading a book for my child and toddler: (Please note: the books have been updated so that they look a little different than what you see in the video.) How to assemble the printed pages of 2-5 of each book (page 1 of my terms of use) on a medium and heavy cardstock. Be sure to print from the front back. Cut the horizontal line in the center of each page. Fit the pages together, making sure the lid is at the front. Other pages can go in any order you choose. Staple with a long-haired stapler (they are cheap - and totally worth it!). If desired, cover each book with clear contact paper to make it more durable.
