You can accept this demand if you are HR8 or higher, so taking this sword during the event period is not a brain. During this event there are quests that are great for enhancing your Hunter Rank. As your HR goes up more quests you will unlock, so those who have low human resources should take advantage of these quests! At the Winter Star festival, quests will easily be obtained, where the materials for augmentation are obtained. We recommend that you make sure that you take advantage of this availability due to the rarity of the Materials to increase augmentation. During the Winter Star Festival, quests where you can easily get monster materials will be available. You can hunt monsters whose material is harder to collect, such as Xeno'jiva. During the Winter Festival will be available quests with maximum and minimal golden monsters. Feel free to run through them as many times as you want and collect rewards! Lucky Vouchers increase search rewards, and Winter Star Tickets are limited time items that are only available at this time. During this event, the day will give you bonus items such as winter star ticket and fireworks! Wow! During the event, the facilities will hold a sale of their items, making them cheaper. The season is to hunt, as it makes it easier to load up on these things because of the drop in price! In addition, there is a special meal available only in gathering hub for the duration of Fest. Seasonal fabric does not cost ingredients and licks its character with 50 points for health and endurance, and has a three-star activation for nutritional abilities! Don't forget to fill up before adventure! The winter festival of the star happens when you enter the gathering center. If you've just started, keep in mind that you need to unlock the History Collection Center before you can do this! Monster Hunter: World, released in January earlier this year, and several of the regular updates have given hunters the opportunity to enjoy events based on the change of seasons. Since it came out, after most of the significant winter holidays have already passed, this month's event is the first chance for players to enjoy everything cold and snowy in the jungles of Astera. The Star Winter Festival offers hunters a chance to repeat all previous events, as well as offer some new high-level hunters for those who have already mastered what the game has to offer. Let's look at what's new and how you can earn it for yourself. General Holiday Like the other three season events Monster Hunter, Winter Star Festival is a limited time event that runs now until December 17. Hunters can enter daily to win a Winter Star ticket, and will receive two Lucky vouchers instead of one during the festival. Winter Star tickets can also be won by completing the (usually) weekly Limited Bounties, which during the event rotate daily to give Hunter more chances to win prizes. Completing these quests can also reward players with cosmetic fireworks, and if you have any extra tickets left after the event, you can replace them with elder Melder for additional winter fireworks. During the event, the Gathering Hub at the top of astera is decorated to fit on a curious theme, with icy crystal chandeliers as far as the eyes can see. The various palikos and NPC in the center also dressed for the holiday, people wear warm winter coats, and pals wear snowman costumes. Winter Star tickets you will win can be used to make these items for ourselves, but we will get to this a little later. Your pig and homemade also get into the winter spirit, and you can change their outfits to match if desired. On the handle you can change by talking to the housekeeper in your room, and you will need to keep track of your pig in the yard to change its appearance. While in the Mall, be sure to check out the sale that happens to each seller, as everything is half way through the event. This includes the canteen, the item farm and the sellers of goods, so it is a long time to stock up on needs such as tools for traps and barrels. While you are in the gathering hub, be sure to take advantage of the free meals available in the canteen in this area. The Winter Star Plateau lifts your attack with two stages and your elemental resistance with one. It also boosts your HP and durability to its maximum values, and provides an excellent opportunity for additional effects as it is made with fresh ingredients. There's even a new animation of sticky, cheese soup included in this platter. The Winter Star Festival brings back almost all previous quest events, so it's a long time to catch up with anyone you may have missed. Be sure to perform through the siege of Kulve Taroth several times, because the Monster Hunter World website says that banquet in the Hall of Earth will not be available after the end of the event. It's unclear whether the search will return in the future, so be sure to do it while you can. The Palico armor, made by Kulve Taroth, is among the best in the game, so don't miss your chance to design a full kit for your cat friend. New quests Most of the events quests available during the festival have made an appearance before now, but there are some new ones to take advantage of. You'll be able to win a few pieces of layered armor by completing the new Kings Not Fear Quest, and the new Timberland troublemakers aspiration gives aficionados Hammer a novelty weapon. For players looking for an extreme challenge. As a moth to the flame introduces arch-Tempered version of Endboss Xeno'jiva. Anyone who claims to master the mastery of Monster Hunter World's heaviest enemy to date can win the special xeno y armor or commission layers of armor. Let's take a look at these quests one by one. Kings do not know any fear begins from the forge, and the master of the blacksmith will send you to the Research Commission asking for some special things. You'll have to be Hunter 13 before it becomes available. Completing this search will win faux ticket II, needed to make layers of Wiggler Head or sealed Eyepatch layered armor. Layered armor allows you to change your appearance without confusing stats or armor set bonuses, and Eyepatch has the advantage of showing quite a bit on your hunter's face. Wiggler's head is one of the silicon suits in the game, a conundrum mask that resembles the ground snakes you'll find in the Coral Mountains. the two layers of armor pieces require one Faux II ticket, so you will you need to run this search several times if you want both. You will also need some additional materials from the quests for non-layered versions of these helmets: fortunately, both Sham Scrapping and Move Me are also available as part of the Winter Star Festival. After you find the task on the board or speak to your scientist, you will be sent to the Elder Rector to hunt Gyalos. You will need to take certain regular red Rathalos as well as Azure option to complete the search. Nor are they stricter than the standard Gyalos you're already struggling with, but they can still be quite difficult for an unprepared hunter. In that with the right equipment will help you tilt the odds in your favor. Both types of gyalos are vulnerable to the Dragon element, so bring a weapon with this attribute if possible. Weapons made by Xeno'jiva or Deviljho parts should work beautifully. Be aware of rathalos fire and try to avoid poisonous tail and nails. If they hit both, you can always put out a fire with Nulberry or from retreating repeatedly, and clear poison by bringing an antidote. It's much harder to take Rahalos down if they unite you, so getting them to split up is a good idea. And Flash Pods will stun them and hit them on the ground briefly, making them much easier to hit them. Finally, before heading off, be sure to take Cool Drinks to the warehouse of your camp in case you fight heads in a hot zone. You will need one Faux Ticket II ticket for each helmet you want to make. Each will cost you 1,000 research points and some elements of the aforementioned quests: two black bandages from Scrapping with the Shamos for eyepatch and two Wiggler tickets from Wiggle me for wiggler's head. The next new task is Timberland troublemakers. This is a lower-ranked search that requires only the Hunter to be ranked four or higher. You will need to take certain two low-quality Anjanath in Ancient Forest to complete this search, so it should not pose a great challenge. If you have problems with it, remember that Anjanath are vulnerable to ICE and Water element weapons, and you can reduce the damage from their breath attack by wearing high-fire armor. Killing or capturing Anias will reward you with a craig ticket. You may want to complete the search several times to win at least three of these tickets if you don't want to run back and forth between the city and the forest. Once you bring the ticket to Craik back to the workshop, Smith will charge you 4,000 Zenny to combine it with three meadow rado headquarters, five sturdy bones and 2 Poison Sac for his own Bristol Pincusion. This hammer with a poisonous element has 676 attack and can cause 150 poison damage, but the real reason for this is to improve Pincusion to a far away Hammer. The Bristoly Chest hammer supports the appearance and poisonous element of Pincusion, but has a far better attack than 1040 and can proc 270 poison damage. It also comes with two augmentation slots for further improvement later. To upgrade Pincusion to malice, you'll need two more armchair tickets, three toxin bag, three radon scale +, one high praise and 32000 Zenny. The latest new event to open the Arch Tempered Elder Dragon final, allowing hunters who want to face a frontier chance to face an absurdly powerful Xenojiva. Hunters will have to group and coordinate their skills in order to have any chance of defeating this boss, since a single gilding usually means doom. Those who prefer a more moderate challenge can take on the regular version of Xenojiva by trying to guard the afterlife quest. New Gear Just like previous seasonal events, hunters can earn some new clothes by collecting tickets provided on a daily basis during the festival. Warm winter coats worn by the NPCC at the Gathering Center can be won in three different forms, but to make all of them, you will need a lot of Winter Star tickets. All coats are part of the Orion kit and have high rank, low rank and layers. If you just want to look like you're dressed in Orion, all you need to do is bring five tickets to the Research Commission and spend 5,000 Research Points to get a set of Orion Layered Armor. This will allow you to dress in a winter coat, no matter what clothes you have underneath. If you prefer to mix and compare with this kit or would like one of the parts for its statistics, you can design separate parts of the kit in the workshop. The low-quality version of the Orion kit is light blue by default. Each piece provides 30 defenses, four ice resistance, and one element to each other. Wearing the entire kit provides 150 protection, 20 ICE resistance, and five for all other items. It's good for those who will face Legiana for the first time, but otherwise it's just for show. It is advisable to reserve your tickets for a high-numbered version of the Orion set, as you can always change the color of your bumper later. If for some reason you want the low version of the Orion set, the material costs are as follows: The Orion Cap is the conundrum of 3000 Zenny, one winter star ticket and one Monster Bone+. It provides a rank of recovery up. Orion cardigan is the bumper of the chest and takes 3000 Zenny, one winter star ticket and two Monster Bone+. It provides one rank Flinch Free. Orion vambraces are the guards and take 3000 Zenny, one winter star ticket and one Monster Bone+. They provide a rank of windproof. The orion is a belt and takes 3000 Zenny, one ticket to Star and one Monster Bone+. It provides one Boost. Orion's boots are the bumper of the leg and take 3000 Zenny, one Winter Star ticket and two Monster Bone+. They provide a single rank of heroism. The higher-ranked version of the Orion kit is a reddish orange color, but otherwise very similar to the low-ranked version. Elemental resistances are the same in the top-ranked set, but the protection of each part is increased to 58 for a total of 290 for the set. Higher-ranked armor also adds some decoration slots, giving it much more flexibility if you plan to wear it for protection. Making each piece of the orion  $\alpha$  set will require the following: The Orion Cap  $\alpha$  takes 9,000 Zenny, one Winter Star ticket, one Fucium ore and one Monster Hardbone. It provides one recovery up rank and has a top level and level 3 slot for decorations. The Orion vest  $\alpha$  takes 9,000 Zeni, one winter star ticket, two Fukium plows and one Monster Hardbone. It provides one flinch free rank and has room for third-level decoration. Orion A 9,000 Zeni, one winter star ticket, one Fuchuit Ore and one Monster Hardbone. They provide one rank of windproof and have a first level and level 3 slot for decorations. A Orion  $\alpha$  9000 Ani, one winter star ticket, one Fuchuit Ore and one Monster Hardbone. It provides a rank of health and has a first level and a third level slot for decorations. Orion boots  $\alpha$  9000 Zenny, one ticket for a winter star, two Fukium plow and one Monster Hardbone. It provides one rank of Heroics and has a first level and a third level slot for decorations. Your Palico can join the festivities, and Winter Star Tickets can be used to give your cat sidekick a new look. Like Hunter's bumper, the Snow Kit for Palicoes has both a low and high-end version available. Both sets provide decent ice resistance and a small bonus to all other elementary protections. High rank also increases gun damage and general defense, so there's no real reason to go with a low-ranked version unless you're just starting the game. If you want to design the low-ranked version for some reason, the necessary materials are as follows: The Felyne Snowcat Bell requires 150 research points, one winter ticket star and one McKalite Rudd. It's a stupid weapon with 16 attacks and a chance to do 140 damage. Felyne Snowcat's head requires 120 research points, one winter old ticket and one McCullough Ore. It provides 16 defenses, four ice resistance, and one resistance to any other element. Felyne's snow suit requires 120 test points, one Winter Star ticket and one McCullough Ore. It also provides 16 defenses, four Ice Resistance, and one resistance to any other element. Just like the orion kit, the high-ranked version of palico armor is far better than its low-key version, although the elemental resistance is not In order to create a Set  $\alpha$ , you will need several different materials. The Felyne Snowcat  $\alpha$  takes 400 points for research, one winter star ticket and one Carbalit Rudd. The damage to the melee has been increased to 50, and the potential ice damage has increased to 240. Felyne Snowcat's  $\alpha$  takes 300 points for research, one winter star ticket and one Karbalit Rudd. Elemental resistances remain the same as the low-level version, but the protection is increased to 46. The Felyne Snowcat  $\alpha$  takes 300 points for research, one winter star ticket and one Karbalit Rudd. Just like the head, elemental properties do not change, but the protection is elevated to 46. One final element for PlayStation 4 hunters is the last cruiser with horizon's star: Zero Dawn. Event adventure Heart of Nora went live in November, and allows hunters to dress up as Aloy without taking a strike penalty. Completing the player rewards search with Aloy Tickets, which can be used to make Layered Alloy Armor or a new Alloy y bumper set with vastly improved statistics. Unfortunately, you still can not mix and combine this armor with other pieces, and it should be made and worn as a complete set. To get Aloy's tickets, you'll need to remove two hard-headed Devijho, the nasty green dragon introduced in update 2.0. If you are having problems with Devijho, be sure to check out our guide. If you just want to look like Aloy and aren't too interested in your statistics, you can still complete an earlier search collaboration The Proof to get Aloy and her bow. Winter Star Fest runs from now until December 17, so be sure to take advantage of everything it has to offer while it's still available. Available.
