Microsoft Word is one of the most widely used programs, both by businesses and individuals, for writing. It can also work offline, i.e. even if you don't have an Internet connection, it's an integral part of the office suite and can be used on both Windows and MacOS operating systems. While you can't add attachments, Word inserts imported files directly into the page. This method of combining files is optimal if you prefer to send one file instead of multiple documents. Let's see, then, through the steps of the next guide how to insert photos and attachments into the Word file. Microsoft Word is a word processing app that lets you create all sorts of documents, such as reminders and emails. So much so that by writing with the program, you can choose from a variety of types of features. Images, tables and links can also be inserted into documents. Incorporating a link into a Word sheet is something that happens frequently. It's a hyperlink that is almost always used through Office. So if you have a good understanding of the Office package, you can make it easy. But if you're not experienced enough, I suggest you use another procedure that will allow you to connect the link you need, without any difficulty. Of course, you need to open a page that will be used in the system and add it. In the next guide, I'll explain how to insert a link into the Word sheet. You can insert one or more files (not just In Word) into Word. Adding, of course, can be done even at the end. So, for example, from the various files that make up the chapters of the book, you can get ... You can insert one or more files (not just In Word) into Word. Adding, of course, can be done even at the end. So, for example, from the various files that make up the chapters of the book, you can get one document. But here's how to get the union going. Move the cursor to the insertion point of the new file, then open the Insert menu and select the File item. In the form that appears, specify the location of the document and then click Insert. If you insert a text document or sheet, pressing the Range button opens a window that allows you to specify a text marker or import zone for only a portion of the document, respectively. Want to attach a PDF to Word but don't know which option is right? Have you tried to extrapolate some pages from the PDF document to insert them into the Word file, but failed? Don't worry, these are two very simple operations. You just have to learn Word features, especially in new versions, can handle PDFs optimally. If you want to insert a PDF into Word as an app, all you have to do is open the DOC/DOCX document to which you want to attach the PDF, recall the option for attachments from the program menu and choose the PDF of your interest. To transplant parts of the PDF into Word, instead, you need to open a PDF of your interest with any program suitable for this purpose (even the word itself, as long as you use a fairly recent version of the software), copy the parts of the text you want to replant and paste them into the Word document. For more information, read on: here's all below. I've used Office 2016 (which is available for Windows and MacOS) for the tutorial, but the guide I'm going to give you applies to all new versions of the Microsoft set. In addition, in the second part of the guide, I'll also take care of LibreOffice and OpenOffice: two free performance kits that you can use instead of Microsoft Office that allow you to work with PDF documents seamlessly. Have fun! IndexInsign PDF in a Word documentIf you want to insert a PDF document into a DOC or DOCX file as an app (so you can click for those who read the text), you just have to open the Word document where you want to insert an attachment, select the tab to insert from the toolbar, and click the object button placed in the top right (white rectangle icon with blue boundaries). In the window that opens, select Create from the file, click View, select the PDF you want to insert into the Word document you're preparing, and click OK to complete the operation. The PDF file will appear in word as a preview, and by clicking on it twice, you can open it in any program suitable for this purpose (such as Adobe Reader) to consult with all its contents. Do you want any changes made to the PDF embedded in the Word document to be reflected in the original PDF file? There's nothing simpler. Once you've selected a document to join the Word file, in the Insert zgt; Subject menu, create from the file, place the check mark next to the link to the file and that's it. If necessary, you can also replace the PDF preview with a simple document icon: just check next to View as an icon item and click the Change Icon button to select an icon to display in the DOC/DOCX file. Warning: Inserting an attachment to Word (whether it's a PDF or any other type of file) means embedding everything doc/DOCX, thereby increasing its weight. Keep this in mind if you plan to send a Word document via email or distribute it online. Open the PDF in WordYY, you do not want to insert a PDF into Word as an application, but you want to transplant the pages of the PDF document into the Word file, you may resort to different methods. The first, the simplest, is to open the PDF directly with Word, select the text of the document with your mouse, copy it (clicking Ctrl-C on the PC keyboard, or cmd-c if you use Mac), and insert the result into Word (clicking Ctrl-V on the PC keyboard, or cmd-V if you use Mac). To open the PDF document with Word, you need to start the program, click on the File button at the top left, select the open element from the opening screen (in the left sidebar) and click on the Button View. At this point, you need to choose a PDF to import into Word, you have to answer OK to the warning that appears on the screen and you have to copy the text of the document as I explained it earlier (and then insert it into the Word destination document). To complete the operation, you must use an Office version that is equal to or larger than in 2013. Previous versions of the package, unfortunately, do not support direct import of PDF files and therefore do not allow you to choose text. If the text of the document is not selected, I'm sorry, but you are dealing with a poorly scanned document, that is, scanned as an image, not as a text document. To solve the problem you need to take the PDF and feed it into OCR software, that is, a program that can recognize the characters of image writing and extrapolate their solutions, hence the texts edited. To find out the best OCR programs at the moment, read the guide I've dedicated to them. If you want tips on which programs to open PDF usage files, read my tutorial on the topic. Insert a PDF into LibreOffice/OpenOfficeUsing LibreOffice or OpenOffice instead of Microsoft Office? No problem. A writer with video recording software included in these hugely popular free performance kits can also insert PDF documents into DOC, DOCX, or ODT files. To insert PDF files into Word documents with LibreOffice or OpenOffice, open the DOC/DOCX/ODT document of interest to the writer, and go to the Insert zgt; Object menu. In the window that opens, place the check sign side by side to create from the file, click Browse/search, select a PDF to attach to word, and click OK to confirm the operation. When attaching, if you want, you can also edit the contents of the latter by clicking twice on its sketch. If you want to link the Word document to the attached PDF file so that the changes made to the document are automatically reflected in the DOC/DOCX file, place the check mark next to link to Files in the insertion window. Note: Of course, if you want, you can insert the contents of the PDF document into LibreOffice or OpenOffice by following the same steps as before for Word. You can even open a PDF with Impress (another app included in the set) and select the text directly with the latter. I explained in more detail how to edit a PDF with LibreOffice/OpenOffice in my tutorial on how to rewrite on PDF. Turn a PDF into WordY should insert all THE PDF pages into Word? In this case, you first convert the PDF into a DOC/DOCX file and work directly on it. There are many online tools with which you can convert PDF documents into Word. Personally, I recommend you try iLovePDF which is free (at least in its main version) and very easy to use. To convert the PDF into Word with the service just mentioned, link to its homepage, drag the PDF document you want to turn into Word in the browser window, and click to start the conversion. So wait until the conversion is complete (it should only take a few seconds) and Word files will be ready to download. If you prefer offline solutions to online solutions, you can simply open the PDF interest in Word and save it as a DOC/DOCX file. You can find more detailed advice on this in my tutorial on how to turn a Word document into a PDF. Personally, I recommend choosing offline solutions, especially if you need to work with documents that contain sensitive data, such as someone's personal information or credit card numbers (thus, you won't run unnecessary privacy risks by uploading them to remote servers).
