Craig Michael Jones (born February 11, 1972, known by his nickname 133) is an American heavy metal musician. Born in Des Moines, Iowa, he is best known as a slipknot sampler and keyboardist. When playing at Slipknot, he is also called #5. Jones joined the band in 1996, shortly after Mate's recording. Feed. Kill. He quickly moved into the role of sampler, but repeatedly replaced Donny Steele with a guitar. After Joey Jordison left in 2013, Jones is now slipknot's second-longest member. Career
Craig Jones joined Slipknot in mid-1996, replacing original guitarist Donnie Steele after recording the band's debut demo, Mate. Feed. Kill. I repeat. Shortly after Jones joined the band by drummer Joey Jordison, who had previously worked with the band Modididious (along with guitarist Josh Brainard), Electronics and Computer Genius moved into the role of sampler due to sound effects, background noise/programmed samples, and an increase in media samples used in the band's music. Mick Thomson replaced him with a guitar. Jordison insisted Jones was happy with the change, saying: Anyway, he liked to come up with all these noises and sounds. Jones' contribution to the band has been described by BBC Music as a kind of audio garnish in the band Dirk Maarstrom, samples, speeches and noises. Jones was given the nickname 133, referring to the processor speed of 133 MHz, which author Joel McIver claimed at the time was considered cutting edge. In September 2004, it was announced that Jones would not perform with Slipknot for a short period of time on the band's European tour due to a medical emergency..A statement on the band's official website read: Craig Jones #133 (#5) was in incredible pain in the first week of our European tour and could not eat properly or sleep. Therefore, it was decided that he would return to the United States for emergency dental surgery. [5] Speaking of the situation, guitarist Jim Root explained, We're filling his place, we've got a picture of him in the dressing room and we miss him every day, but we couldn't cancel the tour. [6] Upon joining the band as a mask guitarist, Jones wore a female pantytoto over his head when he first played what was said to be a compressed, on his face,See. [7] It was later changed to an astronaut's space helmet and a long nail was struck out. The helmet was later replaced by a bondage mask, which also added a zipper over his mouth. Along with Root and Thomson's mask, Jones' mask has been recognized by fans as very consistent over the course of Slipknot's career. On the group's 2019 album We Are Not Your Kind, his mask was slightly modified, his nails replaced by screws and long replaced with the top of the mask to achieve the Mohican effect. Private life
Jones often earns him the nickname Quiet Person and is identified by the media as the quietest and private member of Slipknot. Vocalist Corey Taylor has commented on his attitude, expressing him as a quietly scary type. Slipknot producer Ross Robinson added: I try to get him to talk and just sit and stare. Loudwire's Graham Hartman noted that he speaks very little and keeps people at a distance, and the theory that these qualities influenced his mask's style. The Guardian's Ian Gittins referred to Jones as a patently bizarre individual and cited the dubbing of the band's manager's sampler as a unabomber, a reference to terrorist Ted Kaczynski. Early in his career, when asked about a job not in Slipknot, Jones replied that he was likely to drive a forklift in a warehouse all day, but joked that he would probably kill people, but he gets the nickname killer. According to Robinson, the latter comment was sampler's first in an interview and sparked many complaints from readers of the publication where it was made. [9] Discography

Slipknot was founded in 1995 by percussionist Sean Crahan and bassist Paul Gray. After several early team changes, the band consisted of nine members: Sid Wilson, Paul Gray, Joey Jordison, Chris Féin, Jim Root, Craig Jones, Sean Clahan, Mick Thomson and Corey Taylor. But after Paul Gray's death on May 24, 2010, donnie Steele, the band's former guitarist, was invited to be the band's bassist on a 2011 tour. Slipknot is often known for its attention-seeking masks, stirring musical styles, and powerful and chaotic performances. [1] The band enjoyed some rapid success with the release of their ep-titled debut album1999. Their next album in 2001, Iowa, increased the band's popularity. After its first hiatus, Slipknot returned in 2004 with volume three (Subliminal Vaas) and in 2008 debuted at Number 1 on the Billboard 200 again with her fourth album, All Hope Is Gone. In addition, the band released a live album, 9.0: Live, Compilation Album, Antenna to Hell, as well as 4 live DVDs. Slipknot signed a recording contract with RoadRunner Records in 1996. Sean Crahan (reed) was the lead drummer until Joey Jordison (now one of the world's top drummers) joined the band. Krahan began to think of the idea of three drummers to create more powerful and intense music and, secondly, to use the walls of sound.
