The service itself outperforms competitors in PayPal and Venmo in ease of use. Sign up super easy and very convincing for friends, especially when out for dinner in San Francisco, where asking a waiter to split the bill is like pulling out his teeth. I like the fact that I can send money to anyone even if they haven't signed up with the square yet. The app is easy to use, fast and clean. There are two options for transferring money to your bank. Either an instant deposit that charges a small fee, or the next day. Or you can save money in your account, and use a square debit card for any purchase online. You can even request a sleek looking physical debit card and use it anywhere. The app itself seems safe, especially with the integration of touch ID for quick payment. This app has changed the way I exchange money with friends or even new dating!! I even started using it to pay the rent directly to my landlord. Welcome to the new modern era. Square cash is now my go-to quick payment transfers to friends and family. Overall you should definitely give it a try, especially with the $10 bonus it gives you!!!! I absolutely love this app. Transferring money is incredibly simple, and the app as a whole is incredibly convenient. This is my personal favorite not only because it is easy to use, but I absolutely love discounts through the boosts you can apply to your card. However, what's hard when it comes to boosts is that most of the boosts I get aren't for things that are local to me. My suggestion would be to push out impulses that are more universal. My two favorite boosts are 10%-15% off any grocery store, and $1.00 from any coffee shop. The app would get a much higher rating from me if those two were permanent options, that we could choose from. They are most likely the two most used ones anyway. My only other suggestion for the app would create an easier and more user-friendly way to customer service through the app. If I have a problem, it's always Merchant And it's stressful because not every concern is that I always have a refund. So I would give the app a higher rating, given that customer service would be easier to contact. Overall I really love the app. This saves me a lot of money and I highly recommend it in general to most people. This is my preferred method to deal with my money. Hello Shelby! Thank you so much for not having time to share your thoughts with us on Boosts. We always experiment with different offerings and we appreciate your feedback in terms of what works best for our customers and we are sure to pass it along with our team. As far as our current support options go, we hope to have a special phone line soon, as this is a request we see often, but we don't have a timeline for it just yet. For any questions you may have, feel free to contact us here: . When I first started using the app, I loved the convenience of it. However, I have noticed that now, if I get money sent to me, the amount of time before I can get the money for free - no matter what the amount - is a few days later than it was when I first started using the app. My sister sent me just $48 on Wednesday and I was given a free option to receive it on Friday, or in this case, to pay a .78 instant deposit fee. Even before this particular deal, there were other days later options for getting money or I would have to pay a fee to get the money instantly and it was a huge amount, I could understand, but why charge an instant fee for such a small amount? And why not just propose the next business day? I think there should be a necessary minimum amount of money before charging for instant access, or at least offer the next day business just like other applications, not 2 or more days later. Maybe there is a rhyme or a reason as you all decide what amount gets paid or not, or how long before the money can be deposited, but I can't figure it out. Before using your app, I used zelle and POP Money, but I thought it was better and switched. Maybe I made a mistake - I don't know if it's worth it anymore. I can only imagine instant fees getting higher and waiting times getting bigger over time. When you're cashing out of your in-app balance in your linked bank, you'll always have two options: a standard deposit that's always completely free and in 1-3 business days depending on the processing speed of your bank, and Instant Deposit, which carries a fee of 1.5% of the total deposit amount, so it varies depending on the amount you are cashing out. The lower the deposit, the less you will be charged! We're trying really be transparent about fees - the exact fee should be clear in the app when you are cashing out, but you can also find the full list here: If we can answer any other questions, please answer back to let us know!
