Color Lenses Coopervision Update: Unfortunately, terms colors have been discontinued by the manufacturer. If the power appears in the drop-down list, it is in stock and you can order it as usual. As a possible alternative contact lens, try Soflens Natural Colour AnonymousAug 19, 2014 at 11:50Amit's pretty bad news. I was hoping Ciba Vision would launch its air optics colors into astigmatism as well! I'm a production manager, and in my experience, this modular approach - to have a well-established colorless lens like Air and print a well-established swatch like Freshlook Colorblends in it - should allow them to all Air Optix products (toric, (toric, ...) the color is also broadly not higher in production costs - even if the lot size is small, if the neat color lenses are made as a niche product (although I think there really would be enough demand if the options were compelling). So I don't really understand Ciba's politics. However, Orion BioColor seems to be worth a bar, sphere, cylinder, shaft, base curve... all a la carte and quite a few color ranges. They also offer a variety of clear student sizes which seem great to me, such as. Freshlooks pure student was too big for me and my natural eye color came across all the time. So I was wondering (maybe a very stupid question!): If I ordered lenses smaller with a clear pupil size than the measured (to avoid such an aesthetic problem), could the eye be trained to cope or adapt to the smaller hole if worn on a daily basis? ReplyDeleteLynn TJanuary 6, 2016 at 2:13 AM I'm sorry, this is so off topic, but I found no other reliable type of forums to ask. I have an eye exam tomorrow, first one in about 6 years, (I had a vision problem found in kindergarten that corrected itself before my teens). Which means if something hasn't changed, I'm fine. I'm looking to make a script plano color links and from what I read it denotes a particular brand links (correct?), so I'm curious about the freshlooks, terms, and acuvue is the only 3 brands that doc. And if so, if I get the freshlook as well, it can be used in any style (for air optics, colors, colorblends?)
