Burrell (born September 21, 1969) is an American chef , television personality, and former instructor at the Institute of Culinary Education. She is the host of the Food Network show Secrets of a Restaurant Chef and co-host of Sausage Cooks in America. She was also one of Iron Chef Mario Batali's sous chefs in the Iron Chef America series and appears on other programs on the network, such as The Best Thing I Ever Ate. She was a contestant on the fourth season of The Food Network competition show, The Next Iron Chef Super Chefs is eliminated in episode 6. She was also a contestant in the first season of Chopped All-Stars Tournament, winning the Food Network Personalities preliminary round to advance to the final round, where she was second runner-up to Nate Appleman (winner) and Aarón Sanchez. In 2015, Burrell won the fourth installment of the Chopped All-Stars tournament and won $75,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. In 2012-2013 she also presented the series Chef Wanted with Anne Burrell. Early life and education Burrell was born on September 21, 1969 in Cazenovia, New York. [2] She studied at Canisius College in Buffalo and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts (BA) degree in English and communication in 1991. [2] A year later, Burrell enrolled at the Culinary Institute of America, where he eventually graduated in 1996 from an Associate in Occupational Studies (A.O.S.). [3] She also studied at the Italian Culinary Institute for Foreigners in Asti in the Piedmont region. Career restaurants After the ICIF experience, Burrell stayed in Italy for nine months, working in various restaurants. [2] She worked in La Bottega del '30, a small restaurant in Tuscany with one seating per night. Burrell returned to the US as a sous chef at Felidia, owned by celebrity chef Lidia Bastianich. [2] The connection with Bastianich would help her career. She became the chef at Savoy, a small prix fixe dining room. After Savoy, Burrell began teaching at the Institute of Culinary Education. Lidia Bastianich's son and restaurateur, Joseph Bastianich, and chef Mario Batali named Burrell the chef of Italian wine merchants, their New York wine shop. [2] The Batali connection would further propel her career. She later became the chef of Centro Vinoteca,[4] an Italian restaurant in New York City's West Village area opened in 2007. She left the restaurant in September 2008 due to her busy schedule and many commitments. [5] The departure also also that they would not start at Gusto Ristorante.[6][7] as both restaurants are part of Mangia Hospitality Group. Burrell planned to open her first restaurant in 2010 in New York City. Burrell opened her Phil & Anne's Good Time Lounge in Brooklyn in the spring of 2017, but the restaurant has been closed since April 2018. [9] Television In 2005, Iron Chef Mario Batali asked Burrell to serve as one of his sous chefs, along with chef and restaurateur Mark Ladner, for a pilot taping of Food Network's Iron Chef America series. She continued to serve as his sous chef during his tenure with the show. Burrell's Food Network series Secrets of a Restaurant Chef debuted June 29, 2008. In 2009, she appeared on another Food Network show, The Best Thing I Ever Ate, in which chefs tell their favorite dishes. In 2010, Burrell and chef Beau MacMillan hosted a Food Network reality series called Worst Cooks in America. [10] Burrell and her co-host lead participants through a culinary boot camp on their journey to become better chefs. The first season premiered on January 3, 2010. Chef Burrell won the challenge when her recruit, Rachel Coleman, took out MacMillan's recruit, Jenny Cross. The second season premiered on January 2, 2011, with Chef MacMillan being replaced by chef Robert Irvine. To raise the stakes, Irvine and Burrell made a side bet, in which Burrell threatened to lose her signature hair and Irvine risked going platinum. Chef Burrell won both the competition and the side-bet,[11] when her recruit, Joshie Berger, took out Irvine's recruit, Georg Coleman. Also in 2011, Burrell became the fourth runner-up in the culinary competition, The Next Iron Chef on the Food Network, to be eliminated in week six of the competition. The third season of Worst Cooks in America premiered on February 12, 2012. Chef Bobby Flay was the new co-host/chef for season three. Chief Burrell won the competition again when her recruit Kelli Powers eliminated Flay's recruit, Vinnie Caligiuri. Season four began on February 17, 2013. Season four ended with Flay's team finally beating Burrell's team, when his recruit, Alina Bolshakova, edged out Burrell's recruit, Rasheeda Brown. Other projects In 2009 Burrell also appeared with fellow Food Network personality Guy Fieri on the Guy Fieri Roadshow. [12] [13] Burrell, along with fellow Food Network personalities Sunny Anderson and Claire Robinson, appeared in the 2009 Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade on the Food Network float. [14] Burrell organised an 11-day Food Network cruise across the Mediterranean and across the Atlantic in late 2011 aboard the brand new Celebrity Silhouette. [15] From June 2012 to October 2013, Burrell received Chef Wanted with Anne Burrell at the Food The show ran for three seasons and 36 episodes. [16] [17] Burrell personally issued a statement to the New York Post in 2012 confirming that had been in a relationship with her friend, chef Koren Grieveson, for two years after cookbook author Ted Allen seemingly outed her on a radio show. [18] [19] [20] Burrell disputed the notion that she had been made up, saying she had not kept her sexuality secret. [19] On December 31, 2012, Anne publicly tweeted that she was engaged to Koren Grieveson.[21][22] but as of 2018 she was in a relationship with Stuart Claxton. On April 21, 2020, Anne announced that she and Claxton were engaged. [23] References ^ Twitter / anne burrell: For the record-my b-day is. Twitter.com. 2011-03-07. Burrell's biography page on FoodNetwork.com Retrieved from Celebrity chef Anne Burrell will be working out a number of wedding plans in the future. Burrell, 50, is now engaged to Stuart Claxton, 48, the Food Network star tells People Exclusively. Burrell met Claxton, who works in ad sales marketing at Univision in 2018, through the dating app Bumble. Claxton popped the question in her hometown of Cazenovia, New York, where the two are currently isolating with Burrell's family. a plan where he and I would have a date night, says Burrell. She set up a nice table in her apartment and we just planned dinner for the two of us. We had a nice time, and Stuart then starts saying, 'Oh, this is a good song to put on a playlist for our wedding reception.' And I say, Okay, sure. But why are we talking about that now? We started talking about family and how much fun it was to be here with everyone, so I kind of started crying though, she adds. Then Stuart pulls a ring out of his pocket and I say, 'Oh my gosh, I can't believe this is happening.' Claxton says he started planning the proposal before social distancing measures were introduced due to the coronavirus pandemic. I got the ring right before we left for Cazenovia [over a month and a half ago], when we didn't really know how long it was going to go on, he says. But I'm really glad I did. I think some silver linings come out of this whole situation, adds Burrell. If it didn't happen, we wouldn't be here with my family, and they wouldn't have been involved in the way they were. RELATED: See the Best Celebrity Wedding Cakes Burrell, who was never married but was previously engaged to fellow chef Koren Grieveson in 2012, says they both knew immediately they were together for the first time. I don't know if we both thought about marriage, but we both of them like: from: This is something. This is going to be real and this is going to be something.' Once you're a 50-year-old woman, you don't really think marriage is going to be on the board for you, she adds. I was always very focused on my career and marriage was never a big thing in my life that I was looking for. When I met Stuart, my opinion of all that changed. Given the current climate, Burrell says she'll hold off on wedding plans and enjoy the moment. Everything's in the air right now, so we haven't even thought about it, she says. We just bask in the joy of this, because that's all we can do for the foreseeable future. While socially distancing herself from her family, Burrell shares simple, crowd-friendly recipes on Instagram. We're a group of nine people in total, and we have two vegans and one gluten free - so that got me a little creative, she says. But I think everyone's creative in the kitchen right now. We're thinking about things that can come out of your pantry. I just made a big fat chili with only canned beans, which was really delicious and actually a big crowd-pleaser, and vegan and gluten free. So that ticked all the boxes. Burrell says she's also heard from previous contestants of her Food Network show Worst Cooks in America-which will premiere its final season on Sunday, May 10-thanking her for giving them skills behind the stove in this time of crisis. They'll contact me and say, 'Oh my God, thank God I was on the show so I can cook something now,' she says. It makes me very happy.
