I swear, baby carriers have to worry about safety at this weight level. It is controlled by a lightning mechanism that is easy to set up and insert/remove. Instructions straight to the carrier It was so helpful we wondered why other carriers didn't do the same. Instructions on Use Baby Carrier One printed directly on the material. As a result, you never have to worry about forgetting how to put on Baby Bjorn. Think of child car seats that always have these instructions, only with you as a car. It's useful, whether you lose the manual or just need a reminder of how to strap when you're on the road. Not everyone carries this book around with them. It also adds a sense of security if you have a desire to over-believe that everything is sitting right. It's easy to take your baby in and out we've checked enough baby carriers at the moment to know the plight of trying to get the kid in and out. For too many models, this leads to twisting, moving, shimmying, anything just to get those feet in. Their feet don't always bend that way, or at least you don't want to find out. So imagine our enjoyment when we started to face carriers that have a solution. Baby Carrier One is one of them (Kolugo is the other - our review here), thanks to segregated straps for children and parents. In other words, you strap on the carrier, buckle yourself and then worry about the baby, maneuvering and buckle them into place. This two-stage separation of the process makes it super easy. Useful buckle and clip mechanism Baby Bjorn features kind of like a backpack. You tighten your waist through two medium straps and they buckle with a mechanism that is much easier than standard buckles. It just appears and locks tight and secure. Excellent stuff for your child and safety Finally, note on the material. The entire assembly is covered with a soft cotton and polyester mixture, which turns into 100% cotton for the liner. This means comfort for your child, and yet, one way or another, does not heat up too much, even when wearing it for long periods of time. Magic. The wish was different It's expensive to be more specific: it's not a cheap baby carrier. You pay for the quality mentioned above, worth $190. Compare this with products with similar features like the Colugo Baby Carrier, which sells for $125 and you can't pay as much. Weight can become a problem that the 800-pound metaphor of the gorilla above is no accident. This thing is heavy. Almost three pounds, to be exact. It doesn't sound like much, but to add it to your child's weight and especially for longer-lasting duties, it becomes quite a bear (okay... gorilla) to carry around. No pockets If you're like most parents and have worn a baby carrier before, chances are you swear pockets. Where else would you put your phone, keys, sunscreen, baby bottle, snacks, nappies, napkins... You get the gist. So here's the problem: no pockets on Baby Maybe it's a compromise with these helpful instructions, but we ended up really missing them. Subtract some moments of moments Some problems with waist belt connectors We mentioned are positive from these waist belt connectors. Now in the opposite direction: they do not fit each other very well. They are more like clips, then buckles, plus they are exposed in the middle of the back, which can become a little uncomfortable over time. Head support is not... Supported? Good baby carriers have head support for newborns looking inside, helping them keep that large noggin ole straight while going on the ride. Baby Carrier One is no different there. But unfortunately, once it's no longer needed in a forward position, head support is just kind of sitting there. The carrier is designed to support the head to roll over in this position. But nothing keeps him in place. No clip, snap or buckle. This means that it can flop around a bit and sometimes even put it in the way. We like the verdict. A lot. This is one of our favorite structured carriers out there, coming just behind Kolgo in our Top Baby Carriers ranking of 2020. If you can afford the admittedly steep price, chances are Baby One will be worth your money. Infant implementation is great, it feels (and is certified to be) safe, and not many of its competitors can eat the ease with which you can take your baby in and out. Meanwhile, printing instructions on the carrier seems so obvious now, it makes you wonder why no other manufacturer does this. Point deductions for price, lack of pockets, and some minor comfort problems for parents. But overall, Baby Bjorn Baby Carrier One is a good choice. Which Baby Bjorn carrier is better? Baby Bjorn is one of the major brands out there in the baby market and they have a bunch of options for parents looking for carriers as well. Baby Carrier One is our favorite, but that doesn't mean you can't take a look at some of the other models: Baby Bjorn Original Carrier, which is in some ways a grandfather of models. This is what most people think when they think of a baby carrier. You can still find it in some stores and on Amazon, but beware: this model is not actually recommended by the manufacturer. This is because it has been replaced: Baby Bjorn Mini, the evolution of the original. It's cheaper than one, for just $80. It's only for children under 12 months old and lighter than 24 pounds because it doesn't actually have a belt for extra support. Try it with the baby, but only pay the money if you know you won't use it the last six months (probably unrealistic). Baby Bjorn One Air. Remember how we complained that Baby Carrier One is heavy? This one is trying to solve the problem. One Air is essentially identical to its brother, except for the fact that it uses a grid instead of cotton / Fabric. It soars about a pound of weight, but it comes with another hefty $220 price tag. Still not sure which one is right? Teh Teh Carrier One is our favorite combination of quality, usability and price. This carrier comparison chart on Bjorn's baby website can help you make sure you feel the same way. Pricing, add-ons and where to buy Baby Bjorn Carrier One costs $190 and is available on both Amazon and the manufacturer's website. You can also find it in most department stores carrying children's goods, including big names like Target and Bed, Bath and beyond. Look for older models, though. Baby Bjorn updates its design and materials every few years. Some of the outlets mentioned above still carry some of these older models that may not fit this review. Buying directly from the Baby Bjorn website is your safe bet. On this site, the manufacturer also offers a few add-ons to consider if you have a budget: Teething Bib, designed to help your toddler soothe his mouth when these white pieces start to break through. A windproof cover that is designed to protect your child and keep him warm in the cold. It comes with a full body covering, including a hood. We haven't tested these add-ons as part of this review, so we can't talk to their quality or utility, but we do know for sure that kids love to chew carriers. Packaging is All We Have for This Review! I hope it was helpful. Want to see all our baby carrier reviews, along with our choice for the best baby carrier-you'll find it all here. In here.
