Reclaimable 70500 282,000 Cloak worn by those who have already overachieved. Completing the cape, also known as the comp cloak, is the best cloak in the game and is awarded to players who have completed the game by completing all the basic materials available. It can be bought at the Warrock Museum for 5,000,000 coins from the museum's top-floor members, who have all the skills trained up to 99, Dungeoneering, Slayer and Invention up to 120, completed all quests and assignments, unlocked all music tracks, prayers and magic spells (except Bounty Teleport), and fulfilled a number of other requirements listed below. When purchased, it comes with a matching hood. The cape can be upgraded to a cropped version after completing a list of additional requirements, including unlocking deep decorative armor in Castle Wars and a full statue of Dakhmarok in the player's home. This does not increase the statistics of the cape. The minimum experience of wearing this cape is 601,991,332. As new content (quests, tasks, achievements, etc.) is introduced, new requirements for the usual or cropped version of the cape may be added. If a player wears a cloak when new requirements for the usual or cropped version of the cape may be added. If a player wears a cloak when new requirements for the usual or cropped version of the usual or cropped version or cropped vers cape unlocks the name Name Completionist. This name can be used without wearing a cloak after unlocking, and will be rearranged when the cape cannot be worn due to new requirements. As long as the player has the right to wear a cloak, he can purchase additional capes from the museum guard. The cape dates back to the Second Era, when he was fascinated by the magician Dahmarok. Players who have fulfilled all the requirements for wearing a completionist cloak can sit on the throne of glory in the Max Guild. The player touches the cape without requirements. Content show Main article: Skillcape The customization screen for the completed Cape Cape Of Cape Completion can be modified with customise option in the Cape's right click menu. In the Skillcape Customiser interface, players have the right option to click on any of the four color palette can also be left to choose the color with the help of the in-game color collector. If a player already has an individual maxcoat when approval of the Cape, the cape of completion will automatically be configured in the same way. These two capes always share the current color choice and have preserved the color presets. This cape leaves a trail of particles behind the owner. Particles vary from white to gold when updated to cropped. The color of the particles is not set up outside of this. Other Ability Cloak combines the abilities of several other subjects: Cape Achievements each of them per second. Max, completionist capes. This will remove Cape Achievement. Additional perks are divided between max and completionist capes. For the list of benefits, see members of the movement can purchase a cloak and hood on the top floor of the Warrock Museum for 5,000,000 coins from the museum's security guard. Trying to touch the cape without meeting all the requirements, will turn the player into a random animal (including monkeys, squirrels and chickens) and knock them off the cape. They will also be provided with a list of remaining achievements and cropped capes, both of which can be filtered out just to show outstanding achievements. Master Cape Accomplishment See Celebrates 120,000 33 2 21 21 Cape Accomplishment See notes 99000 33 2 21 21 Completion Cape beats all other capes, including spotted cape, spottier cape, and wicked cape. The completion of the cape was first mentioned in the Cape Differences developers blog; at the time, he was called an uber cloak. Unlocking all emotions is not a requirement for the Completionist cape, as many of them have to be bought for real life money and some are discontinued. After a player buys his first completionist cloak, their Adventurer's Log reads: Bought my first completionist cape. I visited the Warrock Museum and took legal ownership of my completionist cape. With the update in October 2011, the trace of cape particles was extended. There was previously a bug where, if the cape was keptaked and the max cloak or the second completionist cape configured, it would not immediately change the keepsaked cape. However, wearing an actual cape, deactivating and reactivating override, or logging in and out will make the changes take effect. This has since been corrected. Earnings or pruning completion of the cape is converted to only 5 million coins if they are lost in the desert, and usually remains as an item in the grave. However, if the player possesses another cloak before they return to the grave in an attempt to get a few capes, one in the grave will be converted into 5 million coins. With an update to player-owned ports on January 7, 2014, Cape Life Stats and Armor Rankings have been updated to match those of the Cape's superb reefwalker. Completing the cape used to be the most expensive item purchased in a store or NPC. On July 1, 2014, the armored cape bonus changed from 207 to 65. The Completionist cape is used to change back to its original colors when entering the desert or other PvP-enabled areas cosmetic overrides not allowed in such places. Max Cape will do it as well. This has since been corrected. An update on August 24, 2015 made it possible for Ironmen and Hardcore Ironmen to receive a completionist cape. There was an error when, if a player owned a cloak and lost the requirements to use it and then regained that ability, the cape would sometimes remain locked until the player logged in and returned. This even happened if the item was equipped with inventory or a bank. This was recorded on February 29, 2016. Despite the stated requirement that you complete all the tasks to meet this requirement if the player has completed the original version of the later reworking of the quest (i.e. if the player completed Romeo and Juliet before it was removed, gunnar's Ground is not necessary to meet this requirements, such as unlocking music tracks. When the completion of the cape was first released, examine the text saying: You have completed RuneScape; go outside.
