Msn hotmail sign in hotmail login page

Microsoft's Matt McGew has developed MSN as a suite of online services and apps. MSN is now known by its new name, Windows Live. Apps available on Windows Live include Hotmail, Messenger, Contacts, Photo Gallery, and SkyDrive. By default, whenever you access a website for a particular Windows Live app in a web browser, you'll land on the Windows Live sign-in page. You can bypass this sign-in page by changing settings to automatically sign in to a specific Windows Live app. Go to the Windows Live app you want to sign in to avoid landing on the sign-in page. Enter your Windows Live email and address and password in the appropriate boxes. Select Remember me and Remember password. To select these options, select the check box in the box to the right of the option. Select Sign in automatically. To select this option, select the check box in the box to the right of the option. Click Sign in. Windows Live automatically logs on. In the future, when you access the Windows Live app website, you'll go directly to the app and bypass the sign-in page. By Stephanie Breaux Network Microsoft, or MSN, the homepage displays a wide range of current themes and new stories. These themes range from sports, weather and the best entertainment stories. To customize your experience on the website, Microsoft has added a number of customization tools. One of these tools is the ability for the user to change the background color of the MSN home page. If you want to change the default home page background to a different color, such as blue, you can do so by editing your personal settings. Visit the MSN home page. Sign in to your account. Click on the Link Configure your page. Select a color under Change Color. You can choose from a wide variety of colors. Click Save & Close. By Maude Coffey If you need more than one email account for personal or work reasons, MSN Hotmail allows you to have multiple accounts. You can create a Hotmail account exclusively for emails related to banking and online stores, or you may need an additional email address so that your personal emails are separated from your work ones. If you ever lose your password or username, an additional account can be a backup that you can safely send to receive. Go to the MSN home page www.msn.com. Click the Hotmail link in the upper-left corner. Click sign up for a new window or tab that opens. Fill in the first field with the desired ID, such as johndoe5. Click the drop-down menu in the next box and select @hotmail.com. Click to see if the ID you want is available. If it is not available, add another between your name or the average start or other combination until you see a confirmation that your ID is available. Create a password in the next box and enter the password below it in the next box. The password must be at least six characters long and must be letters or numbers. Make the password difficult for someone to guess. Write down your new username and password and put it in a safe place. Enter your current Hotmail address in the alternate email address field to get your password. You can also create security issues to get a password if you like. If this is your first Hotmail address, leave this field blank for now. Fill in the requested personal information and CAPTCHA box. Read the Microsoft Service Agreement and Privacy Statement. After agreeing to the terms and agreeing to receive emails from MSN and affiliates, click I accept. The screen will immediately move to the new Inbox. If this is hotmail's first address, follow these steps to create an additional account: .gov means it's official. Federal government websites often end on .gov or .mil.
