When we go to the casino, we go for a complete experience of some time at the game, some time for a walk, and some time to eat nice relaxing in a pleasant environment. Dorothy just didn't cut it for that third criteria. Dorothy is a type of hybrid between dinner and cafeteria. It's like a cafeteria because it has a very common décor, almost no decoration, and seems designed to take you in and out quickly, so you can go back to losing your money without delay. If you want a pleasant place to linger on a conversation with friends and enjoy the environment, this isn't it. It's also like a cafeteria because you order your meals over the counter and except because it's taken away to you on a tray, there's no service. It's like dinner in terms of the type of food on offer, although the menu is far more limited than most dinners. Although I wasn't impressed by the dining environment (clean and utilitarian but I've seen it better decorated McDonald's), the food is actually good. Menu items are very basic, daily options with little or no imagination, but they are still pretty good. The portion size is good but not large, and the price is reasonable. I had a cheesesteak Philly sandwich and it was done well, and my wife had a turkey dinner with surprisingly good white meat that was freshly carved. If you don't mind eating in a drab atmosphere, you'll still get a good meal. They have the same daily specials every week. Fish dinners, not so great. Alfredo, delicious but sauce sauce Thin.
