All rights protected by Chaya Lindner is a teenager living in Nazi-occupied Poland. Just being Jewish puts her in danger of being killed or sent to camps. After her younger sister is taken away, her younger brother disappears, and her parents all but give up hope, Chaya is determined to make a difference. Using forged documents and his fair features, Chaya becomes a courier and travels between the Jewish ghettos of Poland, smuggling food, documents and even people. Soon Chaya joins the resistance cell, which conducts raids on the supplies of the Nazis. But after the mission goes horribly wrong, Chay's network is destroyed. She alone does not know where to go until Esther, a member of her cell, finds her and delivers a message that cools Chay to her core, and sends her on the path to an even greater uprising in the works - in the Warsaw ghetto. Although the Jewish resistance never had much chance against the Nazis, they were determined to save as many lives as possible, and live - or die - with honor. But that's what Janek Gruner faces. As a Jewish boy in 1930s Poland, Janek is at the mercy of the Nazis who took over. All he has, and everyone he loves, has been snatched violently from him. And then Janek himself is in captivity - his hand is tattooed with the words PRISONER B-3087. He is forced from one nightmarish concentration camp to another as World War II rages around him. He is confronted with an evil he could never have imagined, but also sees amazing glimmers of hope amid the horror. He barely escapes death, only to confront her again seconds later. Can Janek go through the horror without losing hope, his will and, above all, his sense of who he really is inside? Based on the surprising truth.
